Britain Mobilizes Fleet, Digs Trenches; Roosevelt Appeals Again to Hitler

Urges Fuehrer To Give Word For Negotiations

Plea Halts Rumor of Mediation
Refuses to Assume Obligations
Stresses 'No Political Involvements'
Says 'Conscience Demands' Action

By Sidney Olson.

President Roosevelt last night asked Reichsfuehrer Hitler to "give the word" for continuance of peaceful negotiations.

At stake, the President solemnly warned, "is the fate of the world today and tomorrow."

In a note cabled to Der Fuehrer at 10:05 p. m., the President appealed for the second time for a "peaceful settlement" of the Sudeten crisis, warning once more of the "unforeseeable consequences and the incalculable disaster" of another world war.

High sources indicated that the second note, addressed solely to Hitler, was the final action of this sort now contemplated by this Government.

The President, who showed the drafted cablegram to Secretary of State Cordell Hull and Undersecretary Sumner Welles at the White House at 6 p. m., based his note on one dramatic sentence:

"The conscience and the impelling desire of the people of my country demand that the voice of their government be raised again and yet again to avert and to avoid war."

But he indicated definitely that this government has "no political involvements in Europe and will assume no obligations in the conduct of the present negotiations," thus halting European rumors that the United States would offer its services as a mediator in the controversy.

Text of Roosevelt's Cable

The text of the cablegram follows:

His Excellency,
Adolf Hitler,
Chancellor of the German Reich,
Berlin (Germany):

I desire to acknowledge Your Excellency's reply to my telegram of September 26. I was confident that you would coincide in the opinion I expressed regarding the unforeseeable consequences and the incalculable disaster which would result to the entire world from the outbreak of a European war.

The question before the world today, Mr. Chancellor, is not the question of errors of judgment or of injustices committed in the past. It is the question of the fate of the world today and tomorrow. The world asks of us who at this moment are heads of nations the supreme capacity to achieve the destinies of nations without forcing upon them as a price, the mutilation and death of millions of citizens.

Resort to force in the Great War failed to bring tranquility. Victory and defeat were alike sterile. That lesson the world should have learned. For that reason, above all others, I addressed on September 26 my appeal to Your Excellency and to the President of Czechoslovakia and to the Prime Ministers of Great Britain and of France.

The two points I sought to emphasize were, first, that all matters of difference between the German government and the Czechoslovak government could and should be settled by pacific mthods; and, second, that the threatened alternative of the use of force on a scale likely to result in a general war is as unnecessary as it is unjustifiable. It is, therefore, supremely important that negotiations should continue without interuption until a fair and constructive solution is reached.

My conviction on these two points is deepened because responsible statesmen have officially stated that an agreement in principle has already been reached between the government of the German Reich and the government of Czechoslovakia, although the precise time, method and detail of carrying out that agreement remain at issue.

"Whatever existing differences may be, and whatever their merits may be—and upon them I do not and need not undertake to pass—my appeal was solely that negotiations be continued until a peaceful settlement is found, and that thereby a resort to force be avoided.

"Present negotiations will stand open. They can be continued if you will give the word. Should the need for supplementing them become evident, nothing stands in the way of widening their scope into a conference of all the nations directly interested in the present controversy. Such a meeting to be held immediately—in some neutral spot in Europe—would offer the opportunity for this and correlated questions to be solved in a spirit of justice, of fair dealing, and, in all human probability, with greater permanence.

"In my considered judgment, and in the light of the experience of this century, continued negotiations remain the only way by which the immediate problem can be disposed of upon any lasting basis.

Should you agree to a solution in this peaceful manner, I am convinced that hundreds of millions throughout the world would recognize your action as an outstanding historic service to all humanity.

Allow me to state my unqualified conviction that history, and the souls of every man, woman and child whose lives will be lost in the threatened war will hold us and all of us accountable should we omit any appeal for its prevention.

The Government of the United States has no political involvements in Europe, and will assume no obligations in the conduct of the present negotiations. Yet in our own right we recognize our responsibilities as a part of a world of neighbors.

The conscience and the impelling desire of the people of my country demand that the voice of their Government be raised again and yet again to avert and to avoid war.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

HIS EXCELLENCY, ADOLF HITLER, CHANCELLOR OF THE GERMAN REICH:

"Allow me to state my unqualified conviction that history, and the souls of every man, woman, and child whose lives will be lost in the threatened war, will hold us and all of us accountable should we omit any appeal for its prevention."

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

King Declares Emergency, Calls Air Reserves

England Hears Hitler May March In Today
Chamberlain Sees No More He Can Do
He Asks Nation to Be Prepared and Calm
London Braces Subways and Mounts Guns

By Joseph Driscoll.
Special Cable to The Post.

London (Wednesday), Sept. 27.—A second world war appeared much nearer early today when it was learned that the mighty British navy is being formally mobilized for the first time since 1914-18.

Other developments in London were:

A royal order declared "a state of emergency exists;"

Auxiliary air forces were called up, and air-raid precautions were pushed at a feverish rate;

Prime Minister Chamberlain broadcast to the empire a seven-minute plea for preparedness, in which he said "at the moment I do not see anything I could usefully do in the way of mediation."

Ominous Steps in Europe

Other European powers took the following ominous steps:

Reichsfuehrer Hitler was reported to have decided to march into Czechoslovakia today at 2 p. m. (8 a. m., E. S. T. unless Prague capitulates.

The British foreign office was said to have information German mobilization would be ordered today.

France prepared to order full mobilization, with 2,000,000 men already under arms.

Italy was reported to have taken the first step toward mobilization of 2,000,000 men between 22 and 32.

Hungary was said to have mobilized.

Belgium, Switzerland and the Netherlands took military precautions to maintain their neutrality.

Czechoslovakia, refusing Hitler's demands for immediate surrender of the Sudetenland, awaited tensely the war it feels sure is inevitable.

Called 'Precaution'

Very confidentially the Admiralty informed English editors it has been decided to mobilize the fleet as a "purely precautionary measure." Accordingly, King George VI will today issue a royal proclamation calling up naval reservists.

The news of the mobilization was considered so important and so confidential that American and other foreign agencies were forbidden to cable a word of it, presumebly under penalty of the dire official secrets act. Later this prohibition was withdrawn when it became known the secret could not be kept at home.

The mobilization will bring the navy's man power up to full wartime strength. It should enable the navy to dominate the seas and to blockade and starve out Germany, as in the last war. Already the chief units of the Home Fleet are maneuvering in the North Sea and the bulk of the Mediterranean Fleet is concentrated within reach of the Suez Canal.

Planes Are Ready

Formal mobilization proclamations have yet to be issued for the air force and the army, but it is known hundreds of war planes are ready to take off for France and beyond on an hour's notice, and many units of the army, particularly the antiaircraft companies, are standing by prepared for the worst.

Mobilization of the navy was decided upon after the cabinet had met for an hour and a half.

Broadcasting to the British Empire and the United States from the cabinet room at No. 10 Downing street last night, Prime Minister Chamberlain gave forth a faint ray of hope—a very faint ray—that somehow Reichsfuehrer Hitler might be deterred from carrying out his threat to march into Czechoslovakia next Saturday and risking a war with Britain, France, Soviet Russia, Czechoslovakia and eventually perhaps the United States.

"I won't abandon my efforts for peace as long as a chance remains," declared the 69-year-old tory premier. "I would be willing, if circumstances justified it, to make a third visit to Germany, but at the moment I cannot see anything I could usefully do in the way of mediation."

Parliament to Meet

As Chamberlain spoke, he must have been conscious that time, peace time, was inexorably flitting away—Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday—and that soon Saturday and wartime would seize Europe by the throat.

Tomorrow Parliament is to meet for a short, emergency session at which it may be called upon to ratify a declaration of war against Germany. Chamberlain promised to inform Parliament fully as to the events which have led up to the "present anxious and critical situation."

"How horrible,e fantistic, incredible it is that we should be digging trenches and trying on gas masks because of a quarrel in a far-away country, between people of whom we know nothing.

"It seems still more impossible that a quarrel which is already settled in principle should be the subject of war."

"Already," he said, "I have done all that one man can do to compose this quarrel."

Czechs Agree To Cession, Poland Says

Plan Follows Fighting
Commission to Rule 180,000 in Area

By the United Press.

Warsaw (Wednesday), Sept. 28.—The government announced early today, after prolonged fighting along the frontier, that Czechoslovakia has agreed to "territorial revision" under Poland's demands for annexation of the Teschen border region.

President Benes of Czechoslovakia has submitted a letter to President Moscicki, saying that he is in agreement with a plan of revision, it was announced.

As a result, it was announced, Poland immediately will submit to Prague a plan for settlement of Warsaw's territorial and minority demands involving 82,000 Poles under Czech rule. Most of the members of this minority reside in the Teschen area, taken from Poland in 1920 to make up the post-war Czechoslovak republic.

It was understood reliably that Poland's terms of settlement would demand evacuation of Teschen by Czech troops and authorities and occupation of the region by Polish troops, 1,600,000 of whom are under arms on wartime footing.

The new boundary, under Poland's proposals, would be fixed by a mixed commission and without the formality of any plebiscite.

Slurring Hitler May Incite Riot, Pine Tells Court

District Attorney David A. Pine told the Court of Appeals yesterday that condemning Hitler in front of the German embassy, like shouting "fire!" in a theater, is apt to provoke a riot.

Pine's brief asked the court to dismiss the appeal of three men and a girl, convicted of picketing within 500 feet of the embassy, who claimed that the law limiting picketing abridged the right of free speech and was unconstitutional.

Free speech, Pine contended, does not extend to creating a tumult or to violating international law, which guarantees protection to diplomats.

Swiss Darken Cities as Air Raid Precaution

Geneva, Sept. 27 (AP).—Swiss cities were darkened tonight as precaution against air raids. League of Nations delegates from 50 nations were forced to sit behind drawn blinds or move about in lightless streets.

Military planes droned overhead from sundown on, watching for telltale lights and reporting by wireless any infractions of the blackout order, which was to last until sunrise.

European Crisis

The day's developments in the European crisis:

1. GREAT BRITAIN mobilized its fleet reserves, shortly after King George had signed an order declaring a "state of emergency," calling up auxiliary air forces for defense.
2. PRESIDENT Roosevelt directed a second peace appeal to Reichsfuehrer Hitler because "the fate of the world is at stake," he said. The appeal followed a cabinet meeting and conferences with his leading foreign affairs advisers; the State Department asked citizens not to travel abroad, and its representatives continued efforts to evacuate Americans from European capitals.
3. PREMIER Mussolini of Italy was reported to have summoned "specialists" from ten classes of reserves; full mobilization of the ten classes was believed imminent. The order would affect 2,000,000 men between 22 and 23. Men of 20 and 21 already are with the colors.
4. FRANCE, with 2,000,000 troops ready to march, prepared for full mobilization of reserves; 150,000 men were on the Italian border. Premier Daladier was reported seeking mediation in the Czech-German dispute by President Roosevelt.
5. BRITAIN'S Prime Minister Chamberlain, in a broadcast to the empire, called Hitler's demands "unreasonable," but said he would make further attempts for peace, if it would do any good. He declared Britain would not fight merely for Czech borders, but that any bid for world domination by force would be cause for war.
6. BELGIUM called up six classes of reserves; the Netherlands strengthened defenses; Switzerland blacked out for air-raid protection; Hungary was reported to have ordered full mobilization.
7. CZECHOSLOVAKIA remained steadfast in its refusal to accept Hitler's demands, and the nation calmly awaited war. Premier Gen. Syrovy scheduled a radio speech today.
8. GERMAN officials declared Prague's rejection of Hitler's "last and final" demands for Sudetenland by next Saturday was a renunciation of the Anglo-French plan, already accepted by the Czechs; Hitler gave no sign of relenting his Saturday deadline—indeed, unconfirmed reports said he had decided to invade today at 2 p. m. (8 a. m., E. S. T.) if Prague had not surrendered.

Italians and French Prepare to Mobilize

Paris to Act Today Turns to Roosevelt Asks for Mediation

By the United Press.

Paris, Sept. 27.—An appeal to President Roosevelt to offer his services as mediator in the German-Czech crisis in a last-minute effort to prevent war, was reported tonight to have been made by Premier Daladier.

France prepared early today to order complete general mobilization. France already has taken all possible steps toward putting her fighting forces on full war footing outside of general mobilization under a formal decree.

United States Ambassador Bullitt conferred with the premier for a half hour, but smilingly refused to discuss the purpose of his late visit.

French newspaper correspondents believed that Daladier, acting on advice of former Premier Blum,

No Official Notice 2,000,000 Involved Optimism Shaken

By the Associated Press.

Rome, Sep. 27.—Usually well informed sources said tonight Italy had begun, quietly and without public notice, to call to the colors specialists of ten classes of reserves.

The action, a possible preliminary to general mobilization, was reported to affect the classes of from 1908 to 1916. The report was not confirmed in military circles.

Italy, with a standing army of 294,000, exclusive of territorials, has refrained carefully from any general call on reserves, estimated to number 6,750,000.

The ten classes, if eventually mobilized, would bring about 2,000,000 men under arms.

High Fascists said the calling of specialists was a "precautionary measure taken in view of the de-

Gen. Syrovy To Talk on Radio Today

Prague Darkened
Slovak Vows Loyalty
Discipline Kept

By the Associated Press.

Prague, Sept. 27.—Behind darkened windows, the Czechoslovak cabinet met tonight with clocks ticking off the minutes leading up to "Der Tag"—Saturday and expiration of Reichsfuehrer Hitler's ultimatum.

It was decided that Gen. Syrovy, who became premier last week, would make a radio address tomorrow, name day of St. Wenceslaus, patron saint of Bohemia.

Syrovy has a strong hold on the popular imagination. He was the general who led 70,000 Czech soldiers in an epic march across Russia to the Pacific and thence around the world to fight against Germany on the western front in the World War.

Praise Chamberlain

After tonight's cabinet meeting a foreign office spokesman said of today's radio address by Prime Minister Chamberlain of Great Britain:

"Chamberlain's speech is considered as the very last effort to maintain peace. Chamberlain went to the extreme limit to which man can go."

On guard against a possible air raid, Czechoslovakia was blacked out, with only powerful searchlights brushing the skies after dusk.

President Benes and the cabinet ministers studied Chamberlain's address, and also scanned reports on large-scale war preparations as troop trains continued to rattle toward Czechoslovakia's twisting borders.

Doctors Mobilized

Anti-aircraft batteries studded the hills surrounding the capital. Swift pursuit planes, tuned for take-offs at a moment's notice, waited at nearby air fields.

Physicians and medical students were mobilized.

Yet, through the whole nightmarish structure, people were keeping perfect discipline.

Scattered fighting still rolled along the borders, but a sense of impending disaster had forged other pre-crisis political dissenters into a firm defense phalanx.

Slovak Loyal

Deputy Sidor, a Slovak autonomist who until recently was an extreme dissenter, made a declaration of loyalty to the coalition government.

Further support came from the Association of German Democratic Youth in Czechoslovakia, which sent Benes a letter saying it was ready to fight for the integrity of Czechoslovakia.

Even Czechoslovaks, who have been great optimists through the weeks of negotiating the Sudeten German issue, fear now that artillery will be roaring along the Bohemian border next Sunday, warplanes swarming over industrial

Rain and Crisis Stall Spanish War

Hendaye, France, Sept. 27 (AP).—Reports reaching this border town today said heavy rains and uncertainty over the European crisis combined to keep the Spanish civil war at a virtual standstill.

Military dispatches from the Ebro River front said artillery alone was active. Activity on other fronts was said to be similarly limited.

Roosevelt Names Board On Rail Strike

Picks 3 Fact-Finders Slash, Tie-Up Halted Respite Is 60 Days

By Robert C. Albright.

Invoking emergency powers under the railway labor act, the President yesterday named a three-man fact-finding board in a last resort effort to avert a national tie-up in rail transportation.

His action automatically postponed for 60 days both pay cut and strike called for October 1, and brought emergency mediation machinery into play in a final attempt to settle rail wage differences.

Justice Walter P. Stacy, of the North Carolina Supreme Court, veteran railroad arbiter, was named chairman of the board.

Appointed to serve with him were Harry A. Millis, professor of economics at the University of Chicago and a member of thesold National Labor Board, and Dean James M. Landis, of the Harvard Lew School, former chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Will Meet Friday

The group wil meet here Friday morning to launch their investigation into both sides of the controversy. Findings will be reported to the President within 30 days, together with recommendations for settlement.

In Chicago on Monday, 19 railway labor unions, representing some 950,000 employes from every branch of the railroad industry, overwhelmingly voted to strike on Friday and Saturday of this week following general notice of a 15 per cent wage cut starting October 1.

Yesterday the National Mediation Board, which failed in initial efforts at voluntary arbitration, advised the President the dispute "now threatens substantially to interrupt interstate commerce to a degree such as to deprive the country of essential rail services."

Emergency Proclaimed

Invoking procedure laid down in the railway labor act, the President immediately proclaimed the emergency and appointed the fact-finding board, thus preserving the status quo between railroads and their workers until December 1.

It was the first time the national mediation machinery had been invoked to settle a general railroad strike, although on nine previous occasions emergency boards had been named in disputes affecting individual roads. In each previous case, with the single exception of the Louisiana and Arkansas dispute three years ago, controversies have been settled on a basis of emergency board findings. In the L. & A. dispute, differences were settled after a seven-week strike.

The strike threat and emergency mediation procedure interrupted efforts of the President to find a permanent solution of the railroads' financial problems, in which Mr. Roosevelt has said the wage issue is only one element.

A six-man committee equally representing railroads and rail labor last week was appointed by the President to recommend helpful legislation for the roads, but sessions were indefinitely postponed as the strike date neared.

In event of a successful settlement, the special committee will meet again before Congress convenes in an effort to agree on aid measures that bogged down last session largely because of differences between the two groups represented.

Chairman Well Known

Heading the emergency fact-finding board named yesterday by the President is a man who has specialized in rail labor arbitration since 1927, and has been frequently drafted for service by Presidents Hoover, Coolidge and Roosevelt.

Noted for his brief opinions, quick wit and humor, the 53-year-old judge first served as a rail labor mediator a year after he became chief justice of the North Carolina Supreme Court in 1926. The National Mediation Board appointed him a neutral arbitrator in the wage dispute between the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and certain Southeastern roads. The following year, President Coolidge asked him to serve on an emergency board of five arbitrating differences between the Order of Railway Conductors, the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen and certain roads west of the Mississippi.

President Hoover called him back in 1932 in an L. & A. labor dispute, and President Roosevelt first called on him in 1933 on a board of investigation on the Texas & New Orleans Railroad labor controversy.

Salvation Army Picks Taliaferro

Sidney F. Taliaferro, vice president and trust officer of the Riggs National Bank, yesterday was elected president of the Salvation Army Citizens Advisory Board, succeeding Isaac Gans, who has held the post eight years.

Victor Deyber was elected vice president, Miss Emily Mackall, secretary, and Thomas P. Hickman was re-elected treasurer. Minor Hudson, Dr. P. A. Maclendon, Robert L. O'Brien and Dr. D. B. Washington were elected to the board.

Bankhead for 1940, Alabaman Advocates Roosevelt Sees Ernst About Dewey Race

Birmingham, Ala., Sept. 27 (AP). Speaker Bankhead, of Alabama, was urged as the Democratic nominee for President in 1940 here today by Senator Hill (Democrat), of Alabama. Speaking before a group of industrialists and businessmen.

Speaker Bankhead said he would not make "any effort to encourage the movement."

The Speaker said he did not believe President Roosevelt would seek a third term in 1940, but he thought the President "will have much to say about who is nominated."

The proposed drafting of Thomas E. Dewey, district attorney of New York, as the Republican candidate for Governor of New York, was the subject of White House conversation yesterday. The Republican State convention at which the nominations will be made for Senator, Governor and two Representatives-at-Large in Congress opens today at Saratoga Springs. The Democrats open their State meeting at Rochester tomorrow.

Morris Ernst, New York attorney, discussed the State's political situation with the President. No information on the trend of their remarks was forthcoming.

Charles West, former Presidential contact man on Capitol Hill and also former Undersecretary of the Interior until Secretary Ickes evicted him, was another who conferred with Mr. Roosevelt yesterday.

West has just completed a coast-to-coast survey of political conditions, and while he would not discuss the White House conversations, said when asked whether he was studying the outlook for the 1940 campaign:

"I neither affirm nor deny the allegation."

President Roosevelt said yesterday he had canvassed the need for reorganizing the Government to make the administrative branch more businesslike.

Mr. Roosevelt said at his press conference he had talked last week with members of a special Congressional committee which formulated the Administration's original Government reorganization program, shelved in the House last session after a vigorous fight.

Asked whether he had considered any changes to make it more acceptable to the House, Mr. Roosevelt said he had been studying only the broad subject of reorganization.

The Roosevelt Administration's "whimsical fetish of sacrificing honest flood control for development of unnecessary hydroelectric power," Senator H. Styles Bridges (Republican), of New Hampshire, asserted yesterday, was responsible for much of the loss of life and property in the recent New England floods.

In a statement outlining the two-year-old controversy in which the Federal Government insisted on retaining power rights on the projects and which blocked the New England States flood control compact made after the disastrous floods of 1936, Senator Bridges said:

"The New Deal must accept responsibility for the fact that the corps of engineers could have been building flood control works for a full year against the flood that struck these rivers last week. I cannot say how much of the works would have been completed. But I do assert that New Englanders feel that the New Deal is guilty of criminal negligence if one year of work could have saved even one life of hundreds of men and women and children who have died or the wholesale destruction of property."

'Tammany Judge,' Retorts James, Censured by Pecora

Penn. Candidate Cites Hines Verdict Lawyers Guild Condemned Him 'Different With Democrats,' He Says

By the Associated Press.

Waynesburg, Pa., Sept. 26.—Arthur H. James, Republican candidate for Governor, tonight attacked the National Lawyers Guild and Justice Pecora, of New York, for questioning propriety of his occupying the bench while seeking public office.

"We don't want any Tammany judge to tell us how we shall run Pennsylvania," he said. "All I can say to Mr. Pecora is, 'you'd better stay at home and clean your own skirts and let us people in Pennsylvania decide for ourselves the right of who shall be a candidate for Governor of Pennsylvania.'"

James said the Lawyers Guild, meeting in Washington, passed a resolution condemning James' combined judgeship and candidacy. Of that meeting James said:

"When there was a Democrat as a candidate for Governor that was all right, wasn't it? But let a Republican judge be a candidate for the office which appoints judges . . . Oh, oh, you are committing an unholy sin for a judge now to be a candidate. You see what they did. They had a little meeting in Washington, a group of lawyers who call themselves the National Lawyers Guild.

"Who do you think was the presiding officer condemning Arthur H. James because he is a judge; none other than Justice Ferdinand Pecora of New York.

"You remember, he's the man who was trying the case against Hines. . . . and just because the district attorney, Thomas Dewey, that fearless Republican district attorney of New York County, used the word 'racket' instead of 'business' in the course of an examination, Justice Pecora grants a new trial to Mr. Hines."

News Union Men Free In Contempt Case

Los Angeles, Sept. 27 (AP).—Superior Judge George A. Dockweiler yesterday dismissed charges of contempt of court against members of the American Newspaper Guild, in connection with a recent strike of editorial workers at the Hollywood Citizens-News.

Judge Dockweiler said he was granting the defense motion for dismissal because the newspaper dropped its original contempt proceedings under a settlement of the strike.

McAdoo Named Chief Of Dollar Line

To Begin in 2 Weeks Will Quit Senate Subsidy Announced

By William V. Neslv.

William Gibbs McAdoo, colorful figure in American politics for a quarter of a century, yesterday stepped from the United States Senate to the chairmanship of the board of the Dollar Steamship Lines, Inc., famed as operator of round-the-world vessels.

Defeated by Sheridan Downey, pension advocate, for renomination in the recent Democratic primaries in California, McAdoo will resign from the Senate and assume his new duties in about two weeks, he said yesterday after announcement of his appointment has been made by Admiral Emory S. Land, chairman of the United States Maritime Commission.

Joseph R. Sheehan, executive director of the commission, will resign to become head of the company, and R. Stanley Dollar and H. L. Lorber will retire from all connection with the company's affairs, Land announced.

Commission Controls It

Reorganization of the official personnel of the company follows recent acquisition of control by the Maritime Commission in a settlement of the company's indebtedness to the Government.

Severe criticism of the former principal owners and managers of the Dollar lines came from Land as he announced McAdoo's selection. The commission held that the former regime had "adopted every conceivable device to drain the earnings and the working capital from the company as rapidly as possible."

Reorganization of the lines will be followed by resumption of its extensive travel service in the Pacific and probably the around-the-world tours as well.

$4,500,000 RFC Loans

An RFC loan of $2,500,000 as working capital for the company, and $2,000,000 for badly needed repairs on some of the line's vessels, has been arranged, Land said, and the operating subsidy of about $3,000,000 a year, previously announced, was formally approved by the commission yesterday. The subsidy agreement will run for five years.

McAdoo, leaving a $10,000 position which he was to lose next January, takes one upon which the legal maximum pay is $25,000 yearly. The salary will be fixed by the board of directors of the company. Land emphasized that control of the company will be entirely in private hands. He said "the commission does not intend to manage the board of directors by remote control from Washington."

The commission chairman said the agreement with the company provides for a replacement program for the company's fleet of 13 vessels, with the exception of the newest one, the President Coolidge.

Old Regime Rapped

He added that the company also agreed to make arrangements to take into its service new vessels being designed by the commission for sale or charter to the company.

The commission's arraignment of the previous manner of operation of the line was sharp.

Admiral Land said the company's major problem had not been due to "lack of business," and cited large commissions paid to executive officers and management fees to affiliated companies.

Terms Are Harsh

Such terms as "dilatory," "neglectful, "obtuse," particularly in failing to supply necessary information in time to be able to claim a subsidy for the company; "evasive," "shockingly incompetent," and "notorious for its almost callous neglect of the conditions and accommodations of its crews' quarters" were used.

"Dollar management has failed conspicuously to co-operate with creditors for the benefit of the company," he said, "and controlling interests have persisted in an attitude which the commission found inimical to the sound development and operation of an essential American flag service from the Pacific Coast."

Foremost problem of the defunct line had come through "the failure of controlling interests to discharge satisfactorily their functions,"

Downey Sees President, Skips Pensions

Talks Only Politics 'Invitation' Questioned Hold Prospects Rosy

Sheridan Downey, who won California's Democratic senatorial nomination on a State $30-a-week pension platform, flew to Washington yesterday to confer with the President, but he talked politics, not pensions at the White House.

Downey said he came here "by invitation of the President." Mr. Roosevelt said he wouldn't put it just that way. The President said Downey intimated he would be very glad to come here and he replied he would be very glad to see him.

Joining Downey in a brief White House call were Culbert Olson, Democratic nominee for the California governorship, and Ellis E. Patterson, Democratic nominee for lieutenant governor.

Pensions Not Topic

Both the President and Downey said pensions were not discussed at the conference, although Downey earlier said he would urge enactment by Congress of the pending "general welfare" bill (Townsend plan), with a 2 per cent transactions tax. Before leaving Los Angeles, he had indicated he would seek national application of the California $30-a-week warrant proposal.

Downey, Olson and Patterson had only a few minutes with the President, and they said time was taken up in painting a bright picture of Democratic prospects in the California elections.

But Downey aired his pension views at length in a statement to the press.

Burdens Unbearable

"These various State attempts are but symptomatic of the efforts of the people to find relief for increasing burdens that are becoming unbearable, and they will continue and multiply until a national solution is found," he said.

"After all, there is disclosed in these efforts by the citizens of individual states, the working of a system of trial and error by the smaller agencies in your system of Government that may more quickly lead to a final solution of the whole problem by the National Government."

Downey denied he was either "the originator or leader" of the $30-a-week-movement, but said, "it has my support and the proposed initiative measure will have my vote." He called his Republican Senate a "pronounced reactionary" and said Bancroft had called President Roosevelt a "crack pot" and "pussyfooter."

The Gallup Poll

Public Divided on Rail Wage Cut Substantial Sympathy for Unions

By Dr. George Gallup,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, Sept. 27.—In the railroad wage dispute which this week threatened to bring on a general strike of rail workers, one factor of growing importance is the attitude of the American public, which would be the first to suffer from a paralysis of the Nation's chief transportation system. Do the voters sympathize with the railroads who seek a 15 per cent wage cut, or with the workers who say they will resist the cut?

GALLUP.

A cross-section survey the Institute finds national sentiment about evenly divided on the issue. Only a slight majority think the workers should accept a pay cut, and not all of these think the cut should be as high as 15 per cent. The indication seems to be that, at this stage in the dispute, the unions have a considerable amount of public sympathy. Future developments may, of course, change the trend.

The Institute asked thousands of voters in all walks of life: "In view of the present financial troubles of the railroads, should the railroad workers accept a pay cut?"

The vote was:

Yes	52%
No	48

Those who voted for the pay cut were asked: "If there is a cut should it be 15 per cent as the companies have demanded? If not 15 per cent, how big should the cut be?"

The replies show that approximately one-half favor the 15 per cent reduction, while the rest vote for cuts ranging from two per cent to 15 per cent.

Putting all these facts together, the public attitude might be summarized as follows:

A little more than half the voters favor a pay cut, but among this group there is no great unanimity of opinion as to how large the reduction should be, almost half favoring some figure less than the proposed 15 per cent.

Oppose Gov't. Ownership

Many observers feel that if the financial troubles of the railroads are not satisfactorily ironed out there may be a move toward government ownership. Institute surveys in the past found the public generally opposed to having the Federal government take over the carriers. The last study, in February, 1938, showed 30 per cent of voters in favor of government ownership, 70 per cent against.

Cummings Finds 'Intervention' Act Aids Justice

Use by the Department of Justice of the act of August 24, 1937, which permits immediate intervention in cases involving the constitutionality of a law has demonstrated that the procedure definitely facilitates decision in the Supreme Court, Attorney General Cummings said Monday.

The act grew its passage out of President Roosevelt's effort to enlarge the Supreme Court.

The Attorney General's annual report said that in 17 instances the department has taken advantage of the act. In five cases the questioned acts were upheld. The other 12 were pending at the end of the year.

Trade Commission Aide Asks Public to Help

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., Sept. 27 (AP).—Garland S. Ferguson, of the Federal Trade Commission, asked the public today to aid in enforcement of fair trade practices.

Speaking before the annual meeting of the National Wholesale Druggists Association, Ferguson said:

"The fear of retaliation is what prevents the public from bringing legitimate complaints to us for investigation.

"We have corrected that situation by adopting the policy of keeping the identity of such people confidential."

9 Governors Vote Opposition to State Trade Bars

Oklahoma City, Sept. 27 (AP).—Governors of nine States agreed here yesterday States should not erect trade barriers at their boundary lines or enact laws interfering with free trade.

Gov. Graves of Alabama proposed the declaration after Gov. Allred of Texas advocated repeal of "narrow, provincial and stultifying legislation against our neighbors."

Graves criticized existing freight rates as "discriminatory" to the Southeast and other sections, and declared "labor has had to bear the brunt of all the differentials."

Others present at the conference were Govs. Johnston of South Carolina, Stark of Missouri, Bailey of Arkansas, Townsend of Indiana, McMullen of Delaware, Cochran of Nebraska, and Marland of Oklahoma.

Gov. George D. Aiken (Republican) of Vermont declared the people, through "indifference and ignorance," are hastening the advent of a completely centralized governmental system in this Nation.

Chamberlain Warns Empire To Be Ready

'Will Fight for Liberty Urges People Be Calm Hitler Doesn't Listen

By the Associated Press.

London, Sept. 27.—Great Britain's weary Prime Minister Chamberlain tonight called on the far-flung British empire to prepare for war—if fight it must.

In a 6-minute broadcast Chamberlain held out little hope of further mediation with Reichsfuehrer Hitler, who demands a large slice of Czechoslovakia by Saturday, but said he would try for peace "until the last moment."

"If I were convinced any nation had made up its mind to dominate the world by fear of its armed force, I should feel that it must be resisted," said the prime minister in a deep voice, obviously affected by the gravity of his words.

Hitler Doesn't Listen

Hundreds of millions of listeners all over the world heard him.

But the one man, Hitler, at whom these words were aimed, remained ominously silent as he conferred with his chieftains in Berlin. A government spokesman there said the Reichsfuehrer did not even hear Chamberlain, though a translation of the speech was handed him when he finished his dinner.

Chamberlain said flatly he considered "unreasonable" Hitler's demand for ceding all of Sudetenland to him by October 1 without any guarantees and without any provision for those inhabitants who may not want to be incorporated in expanding greater Germany.

The British Prime Minister dealt directly with conditions which he indicated might mean war.

Will Fight for Liberty

"However much we may sympathize with a small nation confronted by a big powerful neighbor we cannot, in all circumstances, undertake to involve the British Empire in war simply on her account.

"If we have to fight, it must be on larger issues," he declared, then adding that he would feel resistance was necessary if convinced any nation sought world domination by fear of her might.

"Under such a domination, life for people who believe in liberty would not be worth living," said the Prime Minister grimly.

After his broadcast from the white-panelled cabinet room of No. 10 Downing street, Chamberlain met with his ministers to consider the grave European situation.

Then he went to work on the speech he will make tomorrow at a momentous session of Parliament convoked extraordinarily because of threatening war.

Joint Session of Parliament

The House of Commons is to convene at 2:45 p. m. (8:45 a. m. E.S.T.) and the House of Lords at 4:15 p. m. Then at a joint session Parliament will hear the prime minister's report on his two flights to Germany endeavoring to keep peace.

Immediately after Chamberlain's speech, his words were broadcast in many languages — including the tongues of Hitler and Premier Mussolini.

In addition to the prime minister's words, German radio listeners were able to hear for the first time President Roosevelt's plea for a pacific solution of the crisis, news that had not been published in Germany.

In his broadcast, the 69-year-old prime minister's voice sounded tired but deep. His words were hurried and his tones broke slightly when he spoke of the "nightmare" of war but he recovered to go on strong and clear.

British Tighten Censorship

London, Sept. 27 (AP).—British censorship of news and photographs—always severe where military secrets are concerned—came under closer official supervision today with the expansion of military preparations due to the Czechoslovak crisis.

Authorities, however, asserted wartime censorship had not been imposed and that only the normal regulations under the official secrets act were in force.

Masaryktown, Fla., Will Aid Czechs

Brooksville, Fla., Sept. 27 (AP).—Two hundred inhabitants of Masaryktown, a Czech village set up in Hernando county 14 years ago, are raising a fund to aid the land of their birth.

Leaders of the village, an outgrowth of Florida boom days, predicted Czechoslovakia would fight to the last man before surrendering the Sudeten territory to Germany.

Masaryktown is a non-incorporated community, named after Czechoslovakia's first president, Thomas G. Masaryk.

700 Auto Workers Go on Strike

Evansville, Ind., Sept. 27 (AP).—Approximately 700 employes of the Plymouth automobile assembly plant here went on strike today after what union officials said was a breakdown of negotiations with the company management.

The plant was closed as also was the plant of the Briggs Indiana Corporation, which makes Plymouth bodies. The Briggs plant employs 1,500 workers.

Col. Turner Plans 500-M. P. H. Plane

Cleveland, Sept. 27 (AP).—Col. Roscoe Turner announced today he will design a new airplane for the sole purpose of attacking existing speed records—at a cost of about $100,000.

The plane will be of an entirely new design and may require the development of a power unit completely different from any now in use, the former Army speed merchant disclosed. He hopes to achieve a speed of 500 miles an hour.

Daddy's Off for the Front

Text of Chamberlain's Talk

By the Associated Press.

London, Sept. 27.—The text of Prime Minister Chamberlain's speech today follows:

Tomorrow Parliament is going to meet and I shall be making a full statement of the events which have led up to the present anxious and critical situation.

An earlier statement would not have been possible when I was flying backwards and forwards across Europe and any position was changing from hour to hour.

But today there is a lull for a brief time and I want to say a few words to you men and women of Britain and the Empire, and perhaps to others as well.

But first of all, I must say something to those who have written to my wife or myself in these last few weeks to tell us of their gratitude for my efforts and to assure us of their prayers for my success.

Letters From Germany

Most of those letters have come from women—mothers or sisters of our own countrymen—but there are countless others besides from France, Belgium, and Italy, and even from Germany, and it has been heart-breaking to read of the growing anxiety they reveal and of their intense relief when they thought, too soon, that the danger of war was passed.

If I felt my responsibility heavy before, to read such letters has made it seem almost overwhelming.

How horrible, fantastic, incredible it is that we should be digging trenches and fitting gas masks because of a quarrel in a far away country!

It seems still more impossible that a quarrel which is already settled in principle should be the subject of war.

Can See No More to Do

I can well understand the reasons why the Czech government have felt unable to accept the terms which have been put forward by German memorandum, yet I believe that, after all the talks by Herr Hitler if only time will allow, it ought to be possible to reach a settlement by agreement under conditions which would insure fair treatment to the populations concerned.

You know already that I have done all that one man can do to compose this quarrel. After my visits to Germany, I realize vividly how Herr Hitler feels that he must champion every German whose grievances have not been met before this.

He told be privately, and last night he repeated publicly, that after the Sudeten German question (is settled) that is the end of Germany's territorial claims in Europe.

Finds Hitler Unreasonable

After my visit to Berchtesgaden, I did give to the Czech government the proposals which gave the substance of what Herr Hitler wanted, and I was taken completely by surprise when I got back to Germany and he insisted that the territory he wanted should be handed over to him immediately and immediately occupied by German troops without previous arrangements for safeguarding the people within the territory who are not Germans and do not want to join the German Reich.

I must say I find that attitude unreasonable.

If it arose out of any doubt that Herr Hitler feels about the intentions of the Czech government to carry out their promises and hand over that territory, I have offered, on behalf of the Czech government, to guarantee their words, and I am sure the value of our promise cannot be underrated anywhere.

I shall not give up the hope of a peaceful solution, or abandon my efforts for peace as long as any chance for peace remains.

Would Visit Hitler Again

I would not hesitate to pay even a third visit to Germany if I thought it would do any good.

But at this moment, I see nothing further I can usefully do in the way of mediation.

Meanwhile, there are certain things that we can and should do at home.

Volunteers are still wanted for air-raid precautions, for the fire brigade and police services, and for territorial units.

I now that all you men and women alike are ready to play your part in the defense of the country, and I do ask you to offer your services, if you have not already done so, to the local authorities, who will tell you if you are wanted, and in what capacity.

Calls Steps "Precautionary"

Do not be alarmed if you hear of men being called up to man antiaircraft defenses, or ships.

These are only precautionary measures such as a government must necessarily take in a time like this, but they do not necessarily mean that we have determined on war, or that war is imminent.

However much one may sympathize with a small nation confronted by a big and powerful nation, we cannot in all circumstances undertake to involve the whole British Empire in a war simply on that account.

If we have to fight, it must be on larger issues than that.

Would Fight for Liberty

I am myself a man of peace to the depths of my soul. Armed conflict between nations is a nightmare to me.

But if I were convinced that any nation had made up its mind to dominate the world by fear of force, I should feel that it must be resisted.

I believe that life without liberty would not be worth living, but war is a fearful thing and we must be very clear, before we embark on it, that it is really very great issues that are at stake and that we should risk everything in their defense.

At present, I ask you to await as calmly as you can the events of the next few days. As long as war has not begun, there is always hope that it may be prevented, and you know I am going to work for peace to the last moment.

Good night.

Kaiser Silently Watches Crisis

Doorn, Holland, Sept. 27 (U.P.).—The former German Kaiser, now nearly 80, has followed anxiously every move of the European situation the last few days.

Wilhelm never listens to the radio personally, but courtiers constantly listen to German and other broadcasts and report fully to him.

None of his household will comment on the situation, being unwilling to strain relations with Reichsfuehrer Hitler, on whom the former "all highest" depends economically.

Sudetenland Digs in for '3 More Days'

Is 'No Man's Land' Thinks Prague to Yield Front Line Stationary

By the Associated Press.

Asch, Czechoslovakia, Sept. 27. The Asch "free territory" of Sudetenland dug in today to wait expiration Saturday of Reichsfuehrer Hitler's ultimatum to Prague.

"Three more days!" was a phrase heard often today in the finger-like territory thrust into Germany from Czechoslovakia.

The Sudetens cling to the belief that the Czechoslovak government will yield 5 minutes before the deadline.

The farmsteads and hamlets in this "no-man's-land" between the Sudeten German and Czechoslovak lines now are almost wholly evacuated. Residents have proclaimed Asch and vicinity a "free territory" and Czech authorities have not attempted to retake it.

Line Remains Same

The village of Voitersreuth was defended by volunteers and members of the Sudeten German "Free Corps," organized in Germany by Konrad Henlein, Sudeten German Party leader, whose home is in Asch.

Voitersreuth used to be a station for both the German and Czechoslovak customs services where all trains from Berlin and Plauen, bound for inner Czechoslovakia, were halted.

The front line remained about where it has been since Sunday. It runs from Voitersreuth in the north, across the main Asch-Eger highway at Antonien, through Seeberg to the Bavarian border, between Liebenstein and Muehlbach.

Sporadic Firing

Sporadic machine-gun and rifle fire could be heard along the southern flank throughout last night and today. This came from outposts, where shots were fired as the opposition changed positions. No casualties were reported on the Sudeten German side.

Henlein made a hurried one-hour inspection trip here yesterday after which he returned to Germany, leaving Deputy Karl Frank on the front as his personal representative.

The Asch government, which perhaps has but a few more days to live, is tightening measures to prevent stocks of necessities from dwindling.

The government says the "free territory" is self-sufficient in dairy products, but cream and butter are becoming short, as are vegetables and pork.

Violations Claimed

Berlin, Sept. 27 (AP).—DNB, official German news agency, reported shooting affrays and border violations by Czechoslovaks today from all parts of the frontier between Germany and Sudetenland.

DNB, said sporadic shooting by Czechoslovaks necessitated a halt in construction on the Adolf Hitler mountain road. A German customs house at Schoemberg, it reported, also became a target for Czechoslovaks.

U. S. Clerk Pleads Guilty of Forging Federal Checks

Mrs. Claire E. Fraser, 42, culminated 20 years in the Government service yesterday by pledaing guilty to forging checks for $494 to pay fictitious contractors in the Shenandoah National Park.

A probation officer will study Mrs. Fraser's record and suggest a penalty to Justice Peyton Gordon, of District Court, who will impose sentence later.

William S. Tarver, assistant District attorney, said Mrs. Fraser's forgeries might total $3,000. The frauds were accomplished by forging checks payable to imaginary persons and cashing them on forged indorsements. The checks were forged between April, 1935, and January, 1937.

Mrs. Fraser gave the Continental Hotel as her address.

2 in Cabinet Urge Better Distribution

Boston, Sept. 27 (AP).—Two members of President Roosevelt's Cabinet today urged a distribution technique as efficient and economical as that already attained in production.

In a letter to the tenth annual Boston Conference On Distribution, Secretary of State Hull asserted the progress of industrial technique had "overcome most of our problems in producing the goods necessary to man's well-being," and added: "Human ingenuity must prove able to overcome the complexities which beset our attempt to secure a wider and more equitable distribution of that plenty."

Secretary of Commerce Roper in another letter said:

"In our domestic as well as in our foreign rtade activities, the objective of all should be to balance economical and efficient distribution technique with that already obtained in production."

Mrs. Peiker's Body Found Off New York

The body of Mrs. Georgia Peiker, who disappeared at sea last week from the French liner Champlain, was identified yesterday after it was discovered floating in the ocean off Coney Island.

A crew of a fishing boat discovered the body, believing she was a hurricane victim.

Mrs. Peiker was the wife of Harry C. Peiker, assistant general manager of the Home Owners Loan Corporation. On suffering a nervous breakdown in London, Mrs. Peiker sailed for home with her 11-year-old daughter, Nan. She was reported missing from the ship Friday. Letters were found in her stateroom addressed to her daughter and to her husband.

Identification was made by John Howard Haley, an HOLC official in New York and a friend of the Peikers.

Born in Seneca, Kans., 48 years ago, Mrs. Peiker attended school and college in Missouri and studied dancing in Chicago and New York. She mas married to Peiker in 1917 at St. Joseph, Mo. They lived at 2101 South Lynn street, Arlington, Va. Mrs. Peiker was a member of the Christian Science Church.

Gasoline Men Duel With Cream Puffs

St. Louis, Sept. 27 (AP). — Cream puffs at 20 paces settled a "feud" today between two service station operators over the smiles of the association's executive secretary at their convention here.

Armed with ten of the gooey pastries each, Carl G. Hodges and Carl S. Johnson squared off on a busy downtown street. Neither had "control," and Harold Fox, the referee, was adjudged loser by seven splatters.

centers, their nation in the midst of a life and death struggle.

With troops on the frontier and with fortifications fully manned, Czechoslovakia gave no indication that she was considering capitulations to the German demand.

Reich Terms Rejected

(In London, the Czechoslovak minister, Jan Masaryk, disclosed his government flatly had rejected the German terms.)

There has been no outward sign of weakening. The government, under French-British pressure, had ageed to sacrifice its Sudeten German borderlands to Germany. London and Paris said that sacrifice was necessary to preserve peace.

But Czechoslovakia contends now that Hitler in his "final demands" on Prague and his Sportspalast speech in Berlin last night has demanded much more than Czechoslovakia originally conceded.

China Wins League Vote Against Japan

Punitive Action Hinted Czech Precedent Is Set Soviet Urges Arms Show

By the Associated Press.

Geneva, Sept. 27.—The Czechoslovak-German crisis helped Dr. V. K. Wellington Koo, China's League of Nations delegate, win an agreement today from British and French representatives that League punitive powers were applicable against Japan.

The Chinese delegate won a favorable vote of the League Council by making China's appeal the precedent for a possible appeal by Czechoslovakia against threatened German aggression.

Moreover, China appeared to have a good chance of persuading the British and French—by pointing to the present crisis—that they should carry out some form of punishment against Japan under Article XVII of the League Covenant, which provides for punishment of an aggressor which is not a member of the League—the same article under which Czechoslovakia would have to appeal against any German aggression.

Soviet Russia's League delegate and foreign commissar, Maxim Litvinoff, was authoritatively reported pressing for a British-French-Russian show of naval, land and air strength as the only possible answer to Reichsfuehrer Hitler.

Both Britain and France appeared eager to keep the League machinery in working order for a possible Czechoslovak appeal. If League powers refuse to participate in some concrete measures against Japan they might run into trouble later if they should desire similar pressure on Germany, Koo said China would ask League members to ban shipments of oil and airplanes to Japan.

Britain Makes Every Ship Ready to Fight

London

and Godesberg, Chamberlain thought Hitler unreasonable in his demand that the Czechs turn over Sudetenland to him next Saturday, instead of waiting some weeks for the new frontier to be marked by an international commission, as originally arranged.

Appeals for Preparedness

The prime minister appealed to Britons to rally to the defense of their country and to take all precautionary measures. This, he explained, "does not mean that we have determined on war or that war is imminent.

"I am a man of peace," he protested. "To the depths of my soul armed warfare is a nightmare to me . . .

"As long as war is not begun there is always hope that it may be prevented, and you know that I am going to work for peace till the last moment."

Chamberlain concluded his speech, which had lasted over seven minutes, with a grave "good night."

Speech Widely Heard

Not since King Edward VIII broadcast his abdication message which was his farewell to the shores of England, has there been such imperial and world interest in any speech from England. The words of the prime minister were heard clearly, save for a minor mechanical hissing sound here andt here, in millions of homes in the British Isles, in the Dominions, colonies, dependencies—and the United States.

Immediately after Chamberlain had spoken, a German translation of the speech was broadcast for the benefit of the multitude of Hitler's followers who sometimes are not allowed to hear from their own stations or see in their own press what is going on in the outside world. This special broadcast also included President Roosevelt's peace appeal, the replies of Chamberlain and President Benes, and the prime minister's added statement—all of which had been suppressed in Germany.

This was the first time that news in German had ever been broadcast over B. B. C. For good measure, special broadcasts also were given in Italian and Czech.

Conflicting rumors of Hitler's immediate intentions were circulated in London. One rumor was that he was granted Europe "two more weeks to live," advancing his war deadline from October 1 to October 15. Another rumor was that he had demanded Czechoslovakia's submission by Wednesday afternoon.

The Czechoslovakian Legation confirm confirm neither report. Its comment was, "It would be unwise to pay too much attention to these reports."

Berlin Denies Reports

The reports were denied at the foreign office and in Berlin. However, the first rumor had one effect, which may have been intended. It boosted stock market prices in the city, where brokers reasoned that Hitler doesn't want war and that, anway, he has to wait until October 15 to finish his Siegfried line of fortifications to keep the French out of Germany.

The possibility that London may be showered with bombs from the air before the week is up was brought home to millions when eight busy subway stations, including one at Charing Cross and Trafalgar Square, werec losed to the public, pending reinforcement with extra steel and concrete to enable them to serve as bombproof shelters.

The official explanation for the closings "urgent structural alterations" and Fleet Street editors were asked not to indulge in speculations which might alarm the public.

Anti-Aircraft Guns Ready

London subway stations during the World War were used by millions as refuges from the raiding planes and zeppelins. They served their purpose well, although usually densely overcrowded and very smelly. However, the bombs used in the last war were pebbles compared to those being dropped in Barcelona today and it is necessary to reinforce the older stations considerably.

As a tangible sign to Germany that Britain means business if war there must be, huge anti-aircraft guns have been hauled forth overnight from army barracks and training centers and set up at strategic spots where they can protect what would be the first objective of any enemy raider, the metropolis of London. Hundreds of these formidable guns were mounted on the coast around Dover and Folkestone, along the Thames Estuary and in the town proper, on bridges and along the Thames Embankment.

Thames Is Guarded

Guns have been concentrated along the Thames because during the last war this shining river was used by the Germans—"Huns" was the word then—as a sure guide to bring them direct to the inviting capitla of the United Kingdom.

Unit by unit the army is being gradually mobilized. The antiaircraft units were among the first to be called out. Gunners and searchlight opertaors rushed to report by taxi. Scores of motor buses transported them to strategic points.

"Keep calm" and "dig" was one newspaper's advice to the English. Hyde Park, Kensington Gardens, Green Park and every other sizeable park in the country have been the scene of day and night activity.

Digging in the Rain

Daylight riders in Rotten Row have reined in their mounts to watch laborers excavating a series of trenches. The digging goes on incessantly despite drizzling rains and despite darkness. Nothing can be done about the rains—in fact, England hopes it rains for 40 days and nights to impede the bombers. After darkness acetylene torches are used to illuminate the digging. Not only in public parks but in millions of private backyards and front yards the hasty excavations proceed.

From one-quarter to one-third of London's 8,000,000 have already evacuated the city for safer spots in the country, preferably far away in Devonshire, Cornawll or Wales.

Plane Crash Fatal to Four Marine Fliers From Quantico, Va.

Some have fled to Ireland, Scotland and the Scandinavian countries. English summer resorts where the season ended about September 1, are again getting a rush of business from customers who would rather risk pneumonia by the sea than hot shrapnel on the sidewalk.

Evacuate Children

Physically defective children in the special schools and institutions of London are to be evacuated tomorrow.

Next to be evacuated will be patients of many hospitals, including government hospitals with their hundreds of horribly maimed veterans of the last war, a war somebody said was to end all wars.

Prime Minister Chamberlain, before going on the air, received a first-hand report from his adviser, Sir Horace Wilson, on the results, if any, of his talks with Hitler in Berlin.

Sir Horace flew to Berlin yesterday to convey a personal communication from the Prime Minister to Der Fuehrer. He had a second interview with Hitler before flying back this afternoon.

"I don't know if I shall be returning to Germany" Sir Horace told reporters. Asked for a message of hope Sir Horace smiled and said nothing. He looked very grave and preoccupied as he entered No. 10 Downing street to report on Hitler's latest mood.

Chief of Staff Calls

Among the callers at No. 10 was Viscount Gort, chief of the imperial general staff; Sir Cyril Newall, air chief marshal, and the high commissioners for Australia, South Africa and Eire.

Southern Island, if it feels menaced by a common enemy, probably will hold staff talks with Britain to arrange a co-ordinated defense against German submarines and war planes.

The French Ambassador paid two visits to the foreign office. The Greek Minister was another caller there.

United States Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy had an audience with King George VI at Buckingham Palace. They were together over half an hour, discussing the international situation. The King thanked President Roosevelt for his appeal for peace.

The following notice to American citizens was issued from the London embassy:

"In view of the complicated situation prevailing in Europe it is considered advisable to recommend that American citizens who have no compelling reason to continue their sojourn here, arrange to return to the United States."

Moscow Remains Calmest Capital In All Europe

Special Cable to The Post.

Moscow, Sept. 27.—Moscow remained today, as it has been for the last few weeks, undoubtedly the calmest capital in Europe. Everybody recognizes the gravity of the situation, but there is not a trace of official or public excitement.

Unwillingness of the Soviet Union to dramatize the present situation is explained partly by the fear that a too vocal Soviet championship might hurt Czechoslovakia. The Soviet Union is not eager to give Reichsfuehrer Hitler the ammunition he needs for his "anticomintern crusade."

Defense Commissar Voroshilov and his assistant, Lev Z. Mekhlis, political head of the Red army, are in Voroshilov-Ussurisk, near Vladivostok, for the Communist party conference being held by the "first special army" which recently opposed the Japanese on Siberia's border.

Lewis Attempts To Revive Bridge For Morgantown

Representative Lewis (Democrat), of Maryland, said yesterday he was "trying to work out something" which would make possible construction of new bridges at both Morgantown and Havre de Grace, with PWA aid.

He conferred with President Roosevelt yesterday, but the President said later that the discussion did not concern the proposed bridges.

Reminded that PWA Administrator Ickes apparently had scrapped the Morgantown structure, while allotting funds for the one at Havre de Grace, Lewis said he was trying "to revive it" velopments in other countries."

The Representative, who unsuccessfully ran against Senator Millard Tydings, with White House blessing, in the recent Democratic senatorial primaries, declined, to answer questions on the possibility of his receiving some Federal appointment.

It was understood from military circles that generals had been assigned to their divisions and army corps in case of emergency. The names of the generals and their divisions were not published.

It was understood also that all leaves for military men have been canceled and passports were being withheld from all men who might come within the draft limits.

Newsboys Hushed

Usually well informed quarters asserted about 200,000 men of the class of 1917 and 1918 already were under arms, as well as a number of special technical groups.

Every means was taken to keep the public calm. Newspaper vendors were forbidden to cry their headlines, and were limited to shouting, "first edition," "second edition," or "last edition," as the case might be.

The information of preliminary steps to mobilization came as Italians, listening to British Prime Minister Chamberlain's speech broadcast from London, gasped at the slender hope expressed of some way of escaping war.

Optimism Shaken

Although official comment was not available immediately, inquiries in private quarters indicated the prime minister's words had shaken the optimism to which they had cling the past few days.

On the other hand a Fascist with high connections expressed what seemed to be the attitude of many:

"We just cannot believe there will be war," he said.

"We feel that some way out will surely be found at the eleventh hour and eleventh minute."

Foreign Minister Count Ciano had a long talk with the Hungarian minister, Baron Frederic Villani, on the latest developments. The speech of Chamberlain was listened to carefully at the foreign office.

Frontiers Believed Safe

Military observers expressed belief that protection of the Italian borders is assured for the present through recent organization of "frontier sectors," composed of soldiers, border militia, police and customs guards. They also said normal movements of warships and planes were enough to safeguard Italian interests at the moment.

The general impression prevailed that even if war comes, Italy would become involved only if France attacked Germany to help Czechoslovakia.

Virginio Gayda, authoritative editor of Il Giornale d'Italia, today asked the meaning of French army and navy preparations "near Italian seas and borders," as well as of British measures in the Mediterranean sea and Egypt.

Nazis Assert Czechs Went Back on Plan

Broken Promise Seen
Demands Maintained
Many Still Hopeful

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Sept. 27—German government quarters declared tonight that Czechoslovakia's rejection of Reichsfuehrer Hitler's demand for surrender of Sudetenland next Saturday was in actuality a renunciation of the original Anglo-French plan, accepted by Prague last week.

These quarters said the rejection, made public today in London, "proves again that the Czechs declare themselves theoretically ready for any agreement, but in practice are unwilling to keep their promises."

(The Czech reply was announced in London.)

Chamberlain Still Trying

British Prime Minister Chamberlain, through Sir Horace Wilson, still sought to negotiate a peaceful solution of the crisis in a brief talk with Hitler.

Hitler, meanwhile—in so far as was indicated by Wilhelmstrasse spokesmen and the German press—showed no sign of relenting from his demands for surrender of Sudetenland four days hence.

To reports that the Fuehrer had extended the deadline, a government spokesman said, "that is pure speculation. Certainly we have received no such word from the Fuehrer, who alone would know."

The impression prevailed that Hitler was leaving the door open to the negotiation method of acquiring Sudetenland.

Many More Hopeful

Many persons were inclined to more hopefulness as a result of Chamberlain's statement today.

Sir Horace was believed to have pleaded eloquently with Hitler to trust Chamberlain and his "way out."

Sir Horace flew back to London and it was understood he carried a request from Hitler for clarification of Chamberlain's guarantee that the Anglo-French plan would be carried out.

It was believed that Sir Horace's greatest difficulty was to overcome Hitler's distrust of Czechoslovakia and it was thought that Britain's guarantee might swing the tide toward a peaceful settlement.

In such a case it was conceivable that Hitler might gloss over his October 1 time limit.

"Carefully" Weighing It

Government quarters, however, said that as a result of the new Czechoslovak stand it follows that Prague is not ready to give up Sudeten German territories in so far as they have been drawn into the strategic Czechoslovak network against Germany or appear to Czechoslovakia to be useful economically or for communications.

The foreign office spokesman said Chamberlain's guarantee was being weighed "very carefully." The language of the prime minister's statement, however, was said to be "not quite clear," necessitating further questions to London.

A division of German troops was reported in position in the corner of Germany bounded by German Austria and Czechoslovakia. On the Czechslovakia side of this border, witnesses reported, barbed-wire was being strung between trees and concrete trenches were being built.

Reports from this sector said Sudeten "free corps" members broke up attempts to build tank traps by firing on Czechoslovak workmen.

Some 200 Sudetens were said to have reached German soil today under a protective rifle "barrage" of "free corps" forces.

Hitler's Reply to Roosevelt

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Sept. 27.—Following is the text of Reichsfuehrer Hitler's reply to President Roosevelt's appeal for peaceful settlement of the Czechoslovak-German dispute:

ADOLPH HITLER

Your Excellency:

In your telegram sent me September 26 you directed an appeal to me in the name of the American people not to break off negotiations over existing controversial questions in Europe, in the interests of the maintenance of peace and to aim at peaceful, honorable and constructive regulation of this question.

Be assured that I thoroughly appreciate the high-minded intentions underlying your argument and that I completely and in every way share your views concerning the immeasurable consequences of a European war.

For that very reason, I can and must decline every responsibility of the German people and its leadership if, contrary to all my efforts to date, further developments should actually lead to an outbreak of hostilities.

In order to form correct judgment concerning the Sudetic problem now under discussion it is indispensable to direct thoughts to events in which in the last analysis the origin of these problems and their dangers are rooted.

The German people in the year 1918 put down their arms in the faith that the conclusion of peace with the opponents at that time would bring a realization of the principles and ideals which were solemnly proclaimed by President Wilson and just as solemnly accepted by all the powers at war as binding upon them.

Never in history has the faith of the people been more disgracefully betrayed than happened then and the conditions of peace forced upon the vanquished nations in the suburbs of Paris (Versailles) have fulfilled none of the promises given.

On the contrary, they created a political regime in Europe that reduced the vanquished nations to pariahs, stripped of all rights, and that was recognized from the beginning by all judicious persons as untenable.

One of the points which most clearly revealed the character of the dictates of 1919 was the founding of the Czechoslovak state and the fixing of its boundaries without in any way taking into account history and nationality.

Sudetenland, too, was included in it, although this region has always been German and although its inhabitants unanimously declared their desire for anschluss (union) with the German Reich after the destruction of the Hapsburg monarchy.

Thus the right of self-determination that was proclaimed by President Wilson as the most important foundation for national life was simply denied the Sudeten Germans.

But that was not enough.

In the treaties of 1919 certain obligations, which according to their wording were very far-going, were imposed upon the Czechoslovak state as regards the German racial element.

Fom the very beginning these obligations were not kept.

The League of Nations failed completely to carry out the task assigned to it, namely, to guarantee the fulfillment of these obligations.

Since then Sudetenland has been engaged in heaviest combat for the preservation of its Germandom.

It was a natural and unavoidable development that after the German Reich regained its strength and Austria was reunited with it that pressure of the Sudeten Germans increased for maintaining their culture and for becoming closely associated with Germany.

Despite the loyal attitude of the Sudeten German Party and its leaders, the points at issue between them and the Czechs became ever more pronounced.

From day to day it became more clearly evident that the government in Prague was not willing to grant most of the elementary rights of the Sudeten Germans.

On the contrary, it attempted to bring about the Czechization of Sudetenland with ever more forceful methods.

It was inevitable that this procedure led to ever greater and more serious tension.

The German government at first in nowise interfered with this development and maintained its calm restraint even when in May of this year the Czechoslovak government proceeded to mobilize its army on the pretext, manufactured of pure cloth, that German troops had been concentrated.

The fact that Germany at that time refrained from taking military counter-measures has merely served, however, to strengthen the intransigeance of the government in Prague.

The progress of negotiations by the Sudeten German Party with the government for a peaceful solution clearly showed this.

These negotiations brought definite proof that the Czechoslovak government had no idea of tackling the Sudeten German problem really from its very foundation and to bring it to a just solution.

As a consequence, conditions in the Czechoslovak state, as is generally known, have become entirely insufferable during the last weeks.

Political persecution and economic suppression have plunged the Sudeten Germans into unspeakable misery.

To characterize these conditions it is sufficient to refer to the following:

At this moment we count 214,000 Sudeten German fugitives who had to leave their house and hearth in their ancestral homeland and who brought themselves into safety across the German border because they saw therein the only and last possibility for evading the revolting Czech regime of force and bloodiest terror.

Countless dead, thousands of injured, tens of thousands of persons arrested and imprisoned, desolated villages are the accusing witnesses before world opinion of an outbreak of hostilities carried out for a long time by the Prague government which you in your telegram rightly fear.

"Entirely aside from the German economic life in the Sudeten German territory for 20 years systematically destroyed by the Czech government, which already shows all the signs of ruin, which you anticipate as the result of an outbreak of war, these are the facts which compelled me in my Nuremberg speech of September 13 to state before the world that the deprivation of rights of the three and one-half millions of Germans in Czechoslovakia must be stopped and that these people, if they or themselves cannot find justice and help, must receive both from the German Reich.

"Howver, to make a last attempt to reach the goal in a peaceful way, I made concrete proposals for the solution of the problem in a memorandum delievered on September 23 to the British premier, which, in the meantime, has been made public.

Since the Czechoslovakian government had previously declared itself already to be in agreement with the British and French governments that the Sudeten German settlement area would be separated from the Czechoslovakian state and joined to the German Reich, the proposals of the German memorandum contemplate nothing else than to bring about a prompt and equitable fulfilment of that Czechoslovakian promise.

It is my conviction that you, Mr. President, when you realize the whole development of the Sudeten German problem from its inception to the present day, will recognize that the German government has truly not been lacking either in patience or a sincere desire for a peaceful understanding. It is not Germany who is to blame for the fact that there is any Sudeten German problem at all, and that the present unjustifiable circumstances have arisen from it.

The terrible fate of the people affected by the problem no longer admits of a further postponement of its solution. The possibilities of arriving at a just settlement by agreement are therefore exhausted with the proposals of the German memorandum. It does not rest with the German government, but with the Czechoslovakian government alone, to decide whether it wants peace or war.

Tobacco Moth, New Pest, Feeds Only on the Best

Blacksburg, Va., Sept. 26 (AP).—A new tobacco pest, whose most alarming characteristic is that it has expensive tastes and prefers to feed on cured leaf of the highest priced cigarette type, is challenging the ingenuity of Vrginia and Federal entomologists.

The insect is the tobacco moth, which appeared in tobacco aging in Richmond warehouses, but this year for the first time has invaded growers' packhouses in southern Virginia and North Carolina and attacked freshly cured leaf.

W. D. Reed, who has been working on the problem of moth control at a Richmond laboratory of the U. S. Department of Agriculture for about eight years, has informed Virginia Tech authorities that heating tobacco barns to a high temperature appears promising as a control measure.

He also said that experiments had been begun in covering cured tobacco with tobacco plant bed cloth and using pyrethrum powder to kill the adult moths in the packing houses.

Daladier Asks Roosevelt to Be Mediator

French

with whom he had conferred for an hour earlier in the evening, had sounded Bullitt out on the proposal of Mr. Roosevelt's mediation.

[Neither the White House nor the State Department here knew last night of any such move, it was indicated.—Editor's note.]

The President, they said, was appealed to as "the heir to the democratic traditions of Woodrow Wilson, the principal author of the Versailles treaty which created the post-war republic of Czechoslovakia.

President Roosevelt, it was said, might be able to establish a peaceful settlement of the situation carrying all Europe toward war.

Blum, in an editorial in the Socialist newspaper Le Populaire, urged Mr. Roosevelt to appeal again to Reichsfuehrer Hitler, pointing out that his plea for peace early Monday failed to reach the German people.

Daladier conferred at length with Navy Minister Campinchi, indicating that France within a few hours might follow Britain's lead in ordering naval mobilization. The French fleet already is on a semi-mobilization basis.

Paris, Sept. 27 (AP).—A surge of optimism that peace can be saved rose in France tonight.

Sources close to the French foreign ministry said pressure of the world's democratic powers had created a definite impression in France that Germany would hesitate before going to war to exact her claims from Czechoslovakia.

They said that pressure would increase steadily between now and Saturday—"Der Tag" which Reichsfuehrer Hitler has set as the deadline for satisfaction of his Sudeten demands.

France's military preparedness, increased by the calling of additional reserves daily, was an example of that pressure.

Troop-Trains Move

Troop-trains rumbled through the south of France moving men and guns into defense positions.

Advices from that region said many troops were being transported to the Italian frontier where an estimated 150,000 men already were manning mountain positions.

While military preparations were stepped up, civilians started an exodus from Paris to beat the rush which would follow any general order to evacuate the capital. Railway stations were crowded with families departing for other sections.

Americans, too, were leaving on the advice of their embassy to return home if they were able to do so.

With 2,000,000 men already under arms, additional reserves were called up today. Their exact number was a military secret.

The British announcement that Britain would fight on the side of France and Russia against German invasion of Czechoslovakia and President Roosevelt's message calling for peaceful solution were taken as further evidences of democratic pressure.

As Premier Daladier left his war ministry offices tonight, after a long day of conferences, he said:

"I would like once more to emphasize the perfect order which reigns in the country, the calm of the nation and the regularity with which disposition of security measures we have been obliged to take have been applied.

"In the international field, the fight for peace is not finished. Negotiations continue. Do not believe our diplomacy is inactive . . . The government will not neglect any possibility to maintain peace in honor."

A solution, these quarters suggested, might be found permitting Hitler to "save face" by allowing him to occupy some section of Sudetenland Saturday with Britain acting as guarantor for German-Czechoslovak negotiations over the rest of the disputed territory.

Trade Leaders Pledge Support Of Trust Study

Henderson Gets Backing Denies 'Witch Burning' Questionnaires Sent Out

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 27.—Dr. Leon Henderson, executive secretary of the temporary national economic committee, the so-called Federal "anti-monopoly" investigation agency, today won from several hundred officers of National Trade Associations a unanimous resolution promising full support of the Government program.

Henderson won the pledge of cooperation after assuring his audience the committee does not intend to embark on a "witch burning" inquiry but plans to gather all available information, analyze it, and then endeavor to launch a plan for "full realization of our national resources" for "plenty," "use" and "security."

Henderson characterized as "just bunk" published reports that the committee had decided on its plan to revise national business practices. The committee has not yet held a meeting to outline the general scope of its conduct, he said, being still in the stage of getting information and analyzing it.

His hearers, members of the trade association executives in New York City, had just before his address received copies of the committee's questionnaire relating to trade association practices.

Henderson and Dr. Willard Thorp, special adviser on economic studies for the Department of Commerce, and Dun & Bradstreet's director of economic studies, said questionnaire answers filed by the association members would not be available to the genaral public, but would not be withheld from other Government officials.

They also warned that the committee has power by subpena to force disclosures not given voluntarily. Thorp, again appealing for co-operation, said however:

"This is not an attack on business, but a study of business."

Meanwhile, Richard C. Patterson, jr., Assistant Secretary of Commerce, asserted that business cannot escape the responsibility of meeting squarely a challenge to analyze its policies and determine their consistency with the Nation's social obligations.

In an address prepared for delivery before the Controllers Institute of America, Patterson urged co-operation of business and Government to "work out an effective co-ordination of policies."

Patterson, member of the economic committee, said that "whatever is done to gain a broader knowledge of our competitive system will in the end, enable us to preserve private enterprise and increase its usefulness in supplying our economic needs."

Housing Parley Adjourns For Storm Aid

Session Cut in Half Straus Urges Speed Emergency Calls Cited

The four-day convention of the American Federation of Housing Authorities here last night was brought to a sudden close by "emergency calls" for housing experts attending the meeting from the New England area to return to their localities to aid in rehabilitation of areas devastated by floods and hurricane.

Prior to adjournment, Nathan Straus, administrator of the United States Housing Authority, had called upon the 300 local housing agencies enlisted in the Nation-wide rehousing program to unite with the USHA to expedite construction in the $800,000,000 building program.

Storm Aid Put First

"There have been so many calls from storm-swept areas for help in rebuilding that we have decided to adjourn the meeting following an executive meeting tonight," Miles R. Frisbee, secretary and executive director of the federation, said.

The meeting originally was scheduled to continue through today and tomorrow.

Straus, asserting "we are all partners in this great movement," declared the USHA has "tried to steer a practical middle course between relinquishing all control over the local housing authorities, which might result in neglect of the responsibilities imposed upon the USHA by the housing act, and, on the other hand, assuming an attitude of arbitrary dictation."

A call for "more decentralization" had been made by Langdon Post, retiring president of the federation.

A plea for local housing agencies to remember the "forgotten third" of the Nation was voiced by Mayor Cornelius D. Scully, mayor of Pittsburgh, Pa.

"'One-third of the Nation, ill-fed, ill-clothed, ill-housed'—the President said that," Scully said.

"We should find no peace until we deal that forgotten third a fair hand in the game of life."

Several Government officials and other housing experts also spoke, including Dick M. Reeser, mayor of New Kensington, Pa., speaking on housing from a small town's point of view.

Text of Czech Note Rejecting Ultimatum

Demands Held Cruel
Resistance Pledged
Propaganda Assailed

London, Sept. 27.—The text of the Czechoslovak government's note rejecting Chancellor Hitler's Sudetenland demands, which was handed to British Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax, by the Czech Minister to London, Jan Masaryk, last Sunday afternoon:

My government has instructed me just now, in view of the fact that French statesmen are not arriving in London today, to bring to His Majesty's government's notice the following message without any delay: (The French statesmen arrived later.—Editor's note.)

The Czechoslovak people have shown a unique discipline and self-restraint in the last few weeks, regardless of the unbelievably coarse and vulgar campaign of the controlled German press and radio against Czechoslovakia and its leaders, especially President Benes.

Accepted Plan Under Duress

His Majesty's and the French governments are very well aware we agreed under most severe pressure to the so-called Anglo-French plan for ceding parts of Czechoslovakia. We accepted this plan under extreme duress.

We had not even time to make any representations about its many unworkable features.

Nevertheless, we accepted it because we understood it was the end of demands to be made upon us and because it followed from Anglo-French pressure that these two powers would accept responsibility for our reduced frontiers, and would guarantee us their support in the event of our being feloniously attacked.

Britain Only An Intermediary

"We have agreed with the French government that the Czechoslovak government be informed that the French and British governments cannot continue to take responsibility of advising them not to mobilize."

My new government, headed by Gen. Syrovy, declared they accept full responsibility for their predecessor's decision to accept stern terms of the so-called Anglo-French plan.

Yesterday (last Saturday) after the return of Mr. Chamberlain from Godesberg, a new proposition was handed by His Majesty's minister in Prague to my government with the additional information that His Majesty's government is acting solely as an intermediary and is neither advising nor pressing my government in any way.

Proposals Go Far Beyond Agreement

Mr. Krofta, in receiving the plan from the hands of His Majesty's minister in Prague, assured him the Czechoslovak government will study it in the same spirit in which they have co-operated with Britain and France, hitherto.

My government now has studied the document and map. It is a de facto ultimatum of the sort usually presented to a vanquished nation and not a proposition to a sovereign state which has shown the greatest possible readiness to make sacrifices for appeasement of Europe.

Not the smallest trace of such readiness for sacrifices has yet been manifested by Mr. Hitler's government. My government is amazed at the contents of the memorandum. The proposals go far beyond what we agreed to in the so-called Anglo-French plan.

They deprive us of every safeguard for our national existence. We are to yield up large proportions of our carefully prepared defenses and admit German armies deep into our country before we have been able to organize it on a new basis or make any preparations for its defense.

Demands Called Cruel, Unacceptable

Our national and economic independence would automatically disappear with acceptance of Herr Hitler's plan.

The whole process of moving the population is to be reduced to panic and flight on the part of those who will not accept the German Nazi regime. They have to leave their homes without even the right to take their personal belongings or even, in case of peasants, their cows.

My government wished me to declare in all solemnity that Hitler's demands in their present form are absolutely and unconditionally unacceptable to my government.

Against these new cruel demands, my government feel bound to make their utmost resistance and we shall do so, God helping us.

We rely upon the two greatest western democracies, whose wishes we have followed much against our own judgment, to stand by us in our hour of trial.

The boys are charged with throwing a switch near Adams that sent a train onto a short spur and plunging over a 25-foot embankment.

Consulting Labor

John P. Frey, president of the metal trades department of the A. F. of L., labors under a misconception when he asserts that the A. F. of L. had no voice in the preparation of the NRA, the Wagner act and the wage-hour law. Representatives of the A. F. of L. and later of the C. I. O. have been afforded numerous opportunities to express their views before Congressional committees, as well as in the press and from public platforms. One strongly suspects that Mr. Frey's grievances are due to the fact that all the demands of the particular faction of organized labor to which he belongs have not been written into the laws passed by Congress.

Mr. Frey is quite justified, however, in urging that the A. F. of L. should take responsibility for suggesting amendments to laws affecting organized labor which are not in all respects satisfactory. There is a vast difference, however, between the presentation of views by organized groups hoping to influence the course of legislation by legitimate methods and pressure to secure enactment of laws in a form already outlined by organizations with a definite axe to grind. We have had too much of the latter kind of ready-made legislation and too little of the sort based on discriminating study of the views of those immediately concerned.

Some of our Congressmen have introduced and secured enactment of laws that would probably never have reached the statute books if they and their colleagues had obtained adequate information about the nature and desirability of such laws from the groups directly affected.

It would be as indefensible to permit labor legislation to be written by a labor lobby, as to draft legislation under the pressure of any organized group seeking special privileges. Nevertheless, such organized groups can make valuable contributions to the formulation of legislative programs. So-called lobbies have fallen into disrepute because they so often fail to maintain a decent restraint in urging Congress to act. So long as they are content to limit their activities to giving advice and information, and do not insist upon writing laws, they perform a public service by assisting Congress to satisfy the just demands of special groups without sacrificing the interests of other sections of the public.

A Moral From Maryland

For two weeks after its primary election, Maryland waited in suspense for the final outcome of the contest between Herbert R. O'Conor, attorney general of the State, and Mayor Howard W. Jackson, of Baltimore, for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination. Not until the Prince Georges County delegation decided to cast its seven votes for Mr. O'Conor was his victory in today's convention assured. It is not often that the machinery for choosing party candidates for public office proves so cumbersome.

As soon as the primary votes had been counted Mr. O'Conor was known to have a plurality. The long delay in terminating the contest was due to the fact that Maryland gives its voters a second choice in selecting candidates for State-wide offices. This arrangement has been in effect for more than 25 years, but never before has it been the decisive factor in nominating a major candidate.

Prince Georges County was left in a strategic position to decide the contest because it favored neither of the leading candidates. Lansdale G. Sasscer, president of the Maryland Senate, was its first choice and William S. Gordy its second. Even when second-choice ballots were counted neither of the leading candidates could claim the county's votes in the convention. That situation left the Prince Georges delegates free to exercise their own discretion.

In adopting this system Maryland sought to make the choice of party nominees more democratic. For the same reason some other States require a run-off primary when no candidate obtains a majority of the votes cast. That plan is a good deal more simple than the second-choice ballot, which often confuses voters and which becomes extremely complicated when a considerable number of candidates are running. But run-off primaries are expensive.

At best democracy is an intricate system of government. Many reforms intended to give greater weight to the voice of minority groups tend to make it more so. In these days, when dictatorships frequently demonstrate the alacrity and efficiency with which they can move, the danger of evolving governmental machinery too cumbersome for effective use is especially apparent. The more pure a democracy, the more numerous its points of weakness.

In some cases the advantages of pure democracy may be definitely outweighed by the disadvantages of complicated procedure. It is a point to which all intelligent reformers will give heed.

Two Broadcasts

The underlying significance of the European crisis was beautifully summarized in the contrast between the radio address of Adolf Hitler on Monday and that of Neville Chamberlain yesterday.

The two speeches, each heard by millions, enabled every anxious listener to judge for himself on the issues which are posed. And in passing such judgment it was scarcely essential to understand the words of either speaker. The lesson was conveyed by the antithesis between the strident emotionalism of the German Fuehrer and the dignified restraint of England's Premier.

Great Britain, and indeed civilization everywhere, may feel proud of Neville Chamberlain. Without bombast, without posturing, without a trace of demagogic trickery, this deliberate statesman rendered to humanity a brief account of his stewardship during the past few weeks. With simple truth he said that he has done "all that one man can do to compose this quarrel." With patent sincerity he pledged himself "to work for peace as long as any chance for peace remains."

In spite of the brevity of his remarks Mr. Chamberlain compressed into them much information for which the world was waiting, information which will help to develop the future attitude of this and other nations as yet neutral in the dispute between Germany and Czechoslovakia.

The British Premier showed, speaking as a dispassionate mediator, that Hitler has been guilty of sharp practice in trying to exact additional and intolerable concessions from Czechoslovakia on top of the tremendous sacrifices that little country has shown itself willing to make in behalf of peace.

He showed also that the full responsibility for any overt act now rests on Hitler. Everyone recognizes the truth of Chamberlain's remark that at this moment there is "nothing further that I can do in the way of mediation." The guilt for the premeditated act of invasion which Hitler ponders is already defined. And not the least asset of Chamberlain's able diplomacy lies in the skill with which he has made this attribution of guilt inevitable, if the Nazi legions march.

Mr. Chamberlain showed, finally, that if an intolerable aggression takes place there will be no doubt as to Great Britain's course. The Premier will ask his great country, and the governments of the far-flung commonwealth of British nations, to join in resisting a regime which has "made up its mind to dominate the world by fear of force." In advance of the event Chamberlain has demonstrated unequivocally where Britain stands. Hitler will at least know what he is taking on if he precipitates the holocaust for which, in his reply to President Roosevelt, he is already seeking to "decline every responsibility."

Responsibilities, as the Fuehrer may live to learn, are not so easily declined by those who gladly shoulder them. Very reluctantly, but very seriously, the ranks are being closed against the appalling challenge of this medieval figure. His game of bluff has been carried to its limit. The period of concessions and compromise is drawing to a close.

That is what Chamberlain told Hitler. Americans, loath as they are to be involved, will applaud the British Premier's belief that "life without liberty would not be worth living." On that conviction the United States, like France and Britain, will in the final showdown take its stand.

Cause For Rejoicing

With the approval of the sale contract by Chief Justice Wheat of the District Court, Secretary Ickes' plan for the conversion of the old Chesapeake & Ohio Canal and its right of way into a national park is virtually consummated. One or two legal loose ends do indeed remain, such as the actual handing over of the $2,000,000 purchase price to the canal company's receivers and the conveyance of the title to the United States. But these formalities will be completed within a day or two.

In its plan for this newest of our parks the Interior Department has shown admirable common sense and good taste. There is to be no attempt at conventional "beautification." The guiding idea of the National Park service will be to restore the canal and its environs as they were a century ago. To this end the canal basin will be dredged, the locks repaired and the lockhouses and other ancient stone buildings will be given their original appearances. Even the landscape will be refashioned as closely as possible to what it was, when President Jackson and his friends planned their canal boating parties.

The accuracy of this restoration is guaranteed by the acquisition by the Government of the old documents of the canal company as well as those of its predecessor, George Washington's Patowmack Company. Thus the canal is to become a living historical record, enabling us to taste actually, as well as imaginatively the early nineteenth century American scene.

To be sure the projected restoration now contemplates only the twenty-two miles between Seneca and Georgetown. But since so much public money is being expended for enterprises far less meritorious or socially valuable, there seems no great reason why the restoration should not be undertaken in the same spirit all the way to Harpers Ferry or even to Cumberland. This would be a magnificent gift to vacationists, since it would make available to them the most delightful of canoe voyages and walking tours in all the East.

For this preservation to posterity of the lovely and historic canal country Americans owe Secretary Ickes congratulation and great gratitude. In time this national park will prove an impressive if bitter lesson to those cities which by neglecting opportunities to acquire riparian rights to their most valuable watercourses have permitted them to be desolated by hideous industrial developments.

USHA Seeks Advice

In his address before the American Federation of Housing Authorities, Nathan Straus took note of the criticism that has been leveled against the United States Housing Authority, of which he is administrator. Indeed, he partly disarmed his critics by inviting them to make a full expression of any complaints against the USHA.

As previously pointed out in The Post, most of the criticism of USHA policies has come from local housing authorities which fear that the national organization is trying to impose upon them a highly centralized program. In his address as retiring president of the A. F. H. A., for example, Langdon Post declared that more details of management should be shifted to the local housing bodies. He believes that the job of the USHA is chiefly "that of a banker." Charles Abrams, general counsel of the federation, complained that housing financed by the USHA fails to reach the lowest income group.

This criticism is intermingled, of course, with a great deal of praise for the USHA. Its representatives have been especially helpful in advising new housing agencies throughout the country on the technique of planning slum clearance projects. While performing this function and negotiating with relatively inexperienced local housing officials, it is not surprising that the USHA should tend to develop a centralized policy.

Fortunately, Mr. Straus himself has opened the way to modification of this policy where changes are found to be desirable. While his address to the federation was a defense of the policies the USHA has followed, he clearly asked for advice and criticism from the assembled local officials. To make certain that all the local agencies are reached, moreover, Mr. Straus is sending a letter to each with the same request for a sincere appraisal of USHA policies.

John Carroll, newly elected president of the federation, left no doubt that it will reply to the constructive suggestion of Mr. Straus with a bill of particulars. A committee is at work correlating suggestions from delegates to the conference. Presumably its findings and conclusions will be submitted to Mr. Straus even though the conference has adjourned.

Criticism solicited and given under these circumstances tends to become helpful advice. By seeking to adjust his program closer to the needs and desires of the local agencies Mr. Straus has manifested his genuine devotion to the cause of slum clearance. So long as this attitude prevails on both sides, it should not be difficult to work out a solution of any problem arasing between the USHA and local housing authorities.

"Women must learn to speak for themselves," declares a noted sociologist. Our research department informs us that there is no record of any instance in which a woman found it necessary to hire a spokesman.

"A Wisconsin woman on relief spent $5 for a permanent wave." It's just as we've been complaining all along: too much relief funds go for overhead.

Stickum Reform

From the Salina (Mo.) Journal.

A SERIOUS PROBLEM.

The matter of the taste of the stickum on the back of Uncle Sam's postage stamps deserves the serious consideration which it appears now to be getting. From the point of view of satisfying its customers—excepting, of course, the philatelist—the Postoffice Department in the past has given entirely too much attention to the pictures on the front and not enough to the stickum on the back.

There would have been occasion for Nationwide rejoicing had the Postoffice Department, a few months ago, announced that instead of spending thousands of dollars in redesigning the pictures on the stamps that it was investing this fund in a huge vat of spearmint flavoring which would have made licking a stamp an occasion for a smile instead of a wry face.

The matter of taste, after all, is of paramount importance even in light of criticism of many fussy souls that stamp licking is unsanitary, archaic and takes up too much of the country's time. The Postoffice Department, it now seems, is attacking the problem from both angles. In the matter of taste it is trying out a stickum made from sweet potatoes and as an answer to the insanitary, archaic and time critics it has finally devised a lick-vender machine that is foolproof. The sweet potato stickum idea, of course, has the additional advantage of offering a new market for a product of the farm where, incidentally, surpluses have been the cause of another serious problem.

The Monitor's Turrett

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In an article printed in The Post June 26, this year, page 4 of the editorial section, the writer, in speaking of the inventions of John Ericsson, ascribes to him, the invention of the battleship monitor. The revolving gun turret used on the Monitor, which was practically the entire idea of the Monitor, was invented by Theodore Ruggles Timby, born in Dover, Dutchess County, New York State, in April, 1922. He made his first record of this invention in the United States Patent Office in 1843. As early as 1841 Mr. Timby exhibited at the War Department, a model of a revolving battery, to be made of iron. Even the raft-like design of the ship was Mr. Timby's. In 1843 he made a drawing of such a low free-board ship with the revolving turret in the center.

The Monitor was built by John F. Winslow and John A. Griswold, of New York, and C. S. Bushnell, of New Haven, Conn., at their own risk and expense. Later they sold the ship to the United States Government. They paid Mr. Timby $5,000 as royalty on the turret. Mr. Ericsson, who was employed by the builders solely as construction engineer, received 5 per cent of the gross sum the company received for the ship.

Mr. Timby was a most distinguished American inventor, and respect for him requires that the mistake be corrected. Mr. Ericsson's own ability was great. G. M. U.

Bouquet For Japan

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Lately I have noticed repeated displays of antipathy on the part of the American public toward the Japanese nation and people—hissing in the movies, boycotts of Japanese goods, etc.

I am wondering if we as a people are not being unfair in forming prejudices against the Japanese race without being fully informed as to their historical background, their national character and their present aims and achievements.

The writer has never been to Japan but I have always understood from those who have been there that the Japanese are a hospitable, thrifty, kindly, clean, hard-working people and that there is much more to be admired about them than there is to be criticized.

The history is such as to evoke the admiration of the entire world. On their small island possessions in the Pacific they were forced from earliest times to wrest a living from the sea. With few natural resources to speed them on their way, they have become by dint of native intelligence and toil one of the leading industrial nations of the world. Theirs has been a valiant and successful struggle for the right to live and prosper as a nation. Let us think twice before we hiss or speak against such a people.

The writer is not well enough informed to discuss intelligently the reasons underlying their present conflict with China but there are always two sides to every question and it seems to me that we have heard only one side—China's. However that may be, it is true that Japan has sadly neglected to inform or educate the American public as to Japan. The Japanese apparently have so many fine things about them of which we are ignorant that it seems a shame no effort has been made on their part to let us have the facts.

Eyes to See

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In The Post recently was a picture of Mr. George E. Ramey, a blind man who operates a stand in the Alexandria postoffice, who has been refused the privilege to bring his Seeing-Eye dog to work with him because animals are prohibited in Government buildings. There are exceptions to all rules and here is one that by all means should be broken. First the dog and training cost Mr. Ramey quite a lot, both in money and time; anybody so afflicted should be shown all consideration. I can easily understand why animals are not allowed in Government buildings, but dogs that function as a pair of eyes should be allowed to take their masters to their places of business and to remain with them until closing time.

MRS. HELEN VAN NORMAN.

Depend On Character

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Nations build in vain if they try to build peace upon any other foundation than that of mutual respect. Any other means, solid though it may seem at the time, is but repeating the age-old error of building upon the sand. In time of stress it will go down.

The respect I speak of is not the fear of armed might but a mutual recognition of the stability of character and an understanding of the admirable qualities resident within each. Nations are only aggregations of individuals and are subject to the same laws.

It is unnecessary to say that the people you respect are not always your superiors in physical might. But there is an intangible atmosphere about them which we call influence or character, which compels respect.

I do not believe in peace at any price nor do I believe in extensive military preparation. Extensive military preparation is only a form of cowardice.

Preparedness consists not in huge armies nor in great collections of guns and bayonets. What wins wars is the spirit behind the gun and bayonet. Therefore foster and develop that spirit.

Depend rather upon your national character than your might to keep war far from you. Make few promises but those you do make—keep. Tend to your own business and do not meddle in the affairs of other nations.

In any controversy be sure you are right. When you are sure, do not back down, mighty though your opponent may be. With God and right on your side it makes no difference how strong he is.

"Not Worth The Gamble"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Those Americans who are agitating and clamoring for our country to intervene in any European situation ought to hang their heads in shame. After hearing Hitler's speech this afternoon I am convinced that it is an insane thought that one American dollar or life should be cast into the intrigues of Europe. I doubt if England will help the Czechoslovaks. It is not worth the gamble.

Do not Americans remember the sad experience of our last intervention in Europe? Are they so credulous and so forgetful of their duties to their own country?

WILLIAM REYNOLDS.

The Balance Of Power

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The world denounces the selling out of Czechoslovakia by England and France.

If it brings lasting peace, the act was justifiable. If on the other hand, it is only a means of prolonging peace temporarily, which is the general conception, it has succeeded only in giving Germany a well fortified eastern front comparable to her western front. All of which adds to a more powerful Germany—more able to defend herself, therefore, putting her in a better position to make further demands.

Can England, under these circumstances, claim justification for her action? Yes, if by so doing she has succeeded in saving millions of lives and billions of dollars. Does she, England, honestly believe she has succeeded in doing this? That is doubtful—rather her action was prompted by the fear of the dismemberment of her vast empire, which is in jeopardy.

England has come to realize that she no longer holds the balance of power, by which power she has in the past been able to dominate world affairs. That all-important balance of power has, during the past few years, transferred itself to the United States. Are we to accept this unsought responsibility, or follow, as we have in the past, the sound advice of our forefathers not to involve ourselves in foreign entanglements?

Sorry He Thinks So

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: For some four years I have been reading the daily Washington Post. I have seen it tend more and more to reaction, particularly in the past six months.

Today, September 20, I picked up my Post and turned to the editorial, "A Breathing Spell." In that editorial you prove yourself more reactionary than even the Herald Tribune. The Nation's press as a whole has vigorously condemned the Franco-British betrayal, but The Post not only condones, but also approves the cowardly treachery of Chamberlain and the French, and the abandonment of Czech democracy.

A Matter Of Perception

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I was disappointed and dismayed to read the editorial in The Post of September 20 on the European situation, following the British and French perfidy.

I was surprised. It seemed not to have the temper of The Post. Nor did it have the fine spiritual perception of your editor. And it most certainly did not sound like Mr. Nover.

I ardently hope that you will not slump from the splendid leadership you have been giving in foreign affairs, and of which I have been able to boast far and near.

Self-Determination

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The right of self-determination is available to each and every Sudeten German.

He has the right to choose to remain in Czechoslovakia or to move to Germany.

This right of self-determination would hardly be opposed by the government of Czechoslovakia, but might be opposed by Hitler.

So it would be Hitler if anyone, who would deny to the Sudeten Germans the right of self-determination. RALPH LEWIS.

Sullivan And The Purge

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The whole world squirms on Hitler's grill, but Mark Sullivan is insensible to any burns except from "the purge." Oh, how O'Connor's defeat does burn him up.

In fighting that stupendous conflagration he has dampened and devastated whole reams of good paper. His lingering preoccupation with "the purge" has hatched this startling residue: that a 10-to-0 defeat would have been better for Roosevelt than what he conceives to have been a 3-to-1 result.

Mother Packs A Trunk

THE wardrobe trunk belongs to Mother. Father gave it to her at Christmas, perhaps because he was tired of marshaling the bulging luggage and weird parcels that accompany her upon her wanderings. The children have separate bags. Everything he himself needs can be carried in his dressing case.

Each dress, carefully tissued, hangs upon its scented, velvet hanger. Those formals probably won't be needed, but better be safe. Something special might come up, even in the modest beach resort that for a few weeks each year is to be the family's mailing address.

Meticulous, methodical arrangement prevails in the trunk. In the bottom drawer are shoes and stockings. Pajamas and underclothes fill the next. Heavily padded hats occupy a third, while the two top drawers are given over to an orderly miscellany of accessories. Swaddled in soft wrappings is the new beach robe, with its matching dressmaker-made bathing suit.

"Nice to have a place for everything, and," Mother smugly quotes, "everything in its place."

Then a little worry puts a wrinkle between her brows. Nights get cold on the beach. She hasn't packed a heavy coat. In their small bags the girls won't have room for any. Father and the boys will have to carry theirs.

By crowding several dresses upon one hanger and discarding tissue paper, the coats can be squeezed in. Dresses have to be pressed when unpacked anyway. It is good she has the traveling set with its midget iron and folding board.

Coats remind Mother of blankets. She wonders if there will be enough at the cottage. Father, Junior, Brother, the girls and herself. Three will have to do. Two can be rolled and placed in the wardrobe compartment. The dresses are already crushed. The third will go in the bottom drawer. An overlooked pile of towels must substitute for the padding around the hats.

Little Judy comes in with her toy dog. It won't go in her bag.

"Oh, Judy, leave that here. You don't want to take toys with you. You'll find shells to play with, and pretty pebbles, and——"

"But, Moth-er-r-r-r." Judy's voice is an aggrieved whine. "Flash has never seen the ocean."

That settles it, of course. The shoe-button eyes of the beloved, if slightly moth-eaten, animal shall not be denied the maritime treat.

Junior's tennis racket, for which he can't find room, is fitted in, next the umbrella, and brother's boxing gloves, from which he can, only with great difficulty, be even briefly separated, find lodgment in corners.

As anticipated, Father gets his things smoothly into his case, but Sister presents the real problem.

"Mother, is my yellow dress finished?"

"You have plenty of dresses without it. This will be a good time to wear your old ones."

"But Mother——"

"I haven't had a minute this week to put it on."

"Mother——"

"Now don't blubber." Mother's voice rises sharply. Sometimes she loses patience with temperamental adolescents. Then to forestall the gathering storm, she exclaims: "Oh well, we'll take it. I'll finish it there."

The April sun reappears.

"Mother!" Ecstatically brushing a butterfly kiss on Mother's nose, Sister dances away upon other urgent business.

Finish it? How? Those patterned tucks on the shoulders. Maybe there'll be a sewing machine in the cottage. Not likely.

Still, a promise is a promise. The portable will have to go. The third blanket is taken from the bottom drawer and spread over the coats and dresses. That looks better anyway. Tissue paper is gouged out of the shoes and the stockings stuffed there. Too bad that old pair will have to be left behind. New shoes get uncomfortable before the end of the day. The portable fits. A quick quest through the growing disorder of a once immaculate room for something to wrap around it reveals Mother's special small pillow. It would be too bad to leave that behind! Hope the machine oil doesn't ruin it.

Mother can't get in the pile of old magazines she wants to check over before discarding, and a collection of sweaters and raincoats will have to be carried after all. She becomes conscious that for some moments Father has been regarding her operations from the doorway.

"You've forgotten something."

"What?"

"The stove."

"Oh you!" Mother has no time now for foolishness. A thought, however, insinuates itself. The cottage will probably be equipped with only a hot-plate. The new electric roaster would come in handy. But Father'd never stop teasing about it until the end of time. Mother gives a relinquishing sigh.

Oh well——.

Skip it!

Fair Enough

'Abusing a 'Flash!'

I FIND among newspapermen and particularly press association men a sense of resentment against the misuse of the word "Flash!" by radio commentators, advertising copy writers and the journalistic ignoranti who have never covered a story or filed a wire.

My friend, Mr. Al Green, the night chief operator of the United Press, says this is almost sacrilegious to him. That is a strong word, but I get his feeling and share it.

A flash is just what the word itself suggests. It seldom contains more than half a dozen words and is used to announce some happening of vast importance. It is followed by a terse statement of the news, called a bulletin.

• • • •

FLASH IS the highest rating in news value. Bulletins come next. Then come stories in the natural order of their importance as news or entertainment. On a news wire a story must always give way for a bulletin. Any point along the system may break in on any story or bulletin at any time to send a flash, such as "Flash! Chicago earthquake."

There is no such thing as an "Add flash!" and any bureau manager along a press association system who had the gall to break in with a flash as cheap as some of the announcements which nowadays are handled as flashes on radio programs would be set back on his heels.

• • • •

YOUNG BUREAU MANAGERS have made honest mistakes of this kind. In the early days of the World War a cub in the Pittsburgh bureau of the United Press broke into a heavy run of news one day with "Flash! Pittsburgh. Naval battle reported off New Jersey." Mr. Fred Ferguson, who was in the slot at the time, killed the flash, but the youth who sent it unfortunately was too far away.

The flash is a newspaper and press association signal to get ready for a story which will dominate page one. Flashes themselves, being quickly followed by bulletins and, as soon as possible, by a more comprehensive and coherent, though possibly brief, type of story called a "lead," are not intended to be cast in type at all. There is a dramatic spirit in the word and it is rarely cheapened in the newspaper business.

• • • •

SOME BUREAUS do not have a flash in the course of a year, for a bulletin may not be of such importance as to justify the use of a preliminary flash.

The old method required the telegraph operator to yelp "Flash!" But the mechanization of the telegraph business abolished this dramatic note and flashes are now signaled by alarm bells on the mechanical telegraph printers. But cheap divorces and routine births, marriages and deaths are not flash matter.

Some papers are more nimble than others in hitting the street with world-shaking stories after the warning flash. In Dallas in 1915 the Journal was entitled to a margin of 15 minutes over the rival Dispatch on flash matter received by the United Press.

THE JOURNAL, a rich and luxurious paper, with more machinery than Bethlehem Steel and more red tape than a bankruptcy, was paying the entire cost of a long wire from Kansas City to Dallas. The Dispatch, also rich but very frugal, was operated almost single-handed by an underpaid but tumultuous youth named Ross Murphy, who got along with a hatful of type, one telephone and an invisible Remington typewriter that could have been used to crush rock and was worth more as an antique than it had been worth new as an astonishing invention, the marvelous mechanical writer.

Mr. Murphy received a flash on the sinking of the British cruiser Hampshire and the death of Lord Kitchener 15 minutes later than the Dallas Journal but was selling his extras in front of the Journal office while the Journal's libel lawyer was still trying to persuade himself that the British Empire and Kitchener's estate would have no case under the horrible Texas libel law if the news were printed even if true.

• • • •

THE TEXAS libel law is the most menacing law of its kind in all the world.

It is an old saying in the newspaper business that you can't libel wrestlers or the common cold, but it isn't altogether safe in Texas to conduct a swat-the-fly campaign.

Enmeshed in its own mechanism, the Dallas Journal was beaten to the street from a 15-minute head start, to the great pride of Mr. Murphy, who collapsed one day, however, and upon regaining consciousness remembered that he had not had anything to eat for three years and eight months. So he resigned from the Dallas Dispatch and went to Hollywood, where, last winter, he weighed 186 pounds and wore rich raiment. He eats every day now and thinks nothing of it.

D. C. to Ask Bids On Court Building

The District Commissioners announced yesterday they would advertise for bids for the foundation of the new Juvenile Court Building today. At the same time they said bids for four other projects financed by the Public Works Administration would be opened early next month.

Foundation for the court building, which will be built on Judiciary Square, is not expected to cost more than $40,000. PWA allotted $550,000 for the structure.

Bids to be opened next month are for construction of foundation footings for the new ward building at Gallinger Hospital; for construction of a storm sewer in the Macomb street area north of Glover-Archbold parkway; for construction of the new Municipal Court Building, and for improvement of roads at the Tuberculosis Sanitarium at Glenn Dale, Md.

The European Crisis

Reactions Of The Public

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Even at this late day I would urge your great newspaper to republish the stirring speech delivered by the President at Chicago on the 5th of October, 1937.

Mr. Roosevelt's speech left nothing to be desired by those who felt that this Nation had some measure of responsibility when one nation unprovokedly attacked and pillaged another. He pictured the United States as a cherubim in defense of the righteous, armed with two flaming swords, sanctions and quarantines. The great resources of the United States would henceforth be marshaled in defense of outraged humanity.

The Nation-wide response to the President's Chicago speech was overwhelming. The President's popularity reached a new zenith. If he had transmitted a copy of that minatory address to Germany last night, late as it was, it might have influenced the course of the Fuehrer. Instead he joined with Mr. Hull in sending a message informing men who were sternly arming for war that a conflict between nations could only result in suffering and death. It must have fallen upon European ears like the twittering of two flustered capons.

Calling Hitler's Bluff

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Show me one opponent picked by Hitler who was anywhere near his size. He has stamped on minorities, he has persecuted religious groups and built his tin throne on a pedestal made with the blood and bone of innocent and unarmed human beings. But now for the first time someone his size is calling his bluff and the rat in Hitler is coming to the surface.

The Kaiser had colonies, wealth and not a little good will in the last war and he lost. Hitler has nothing but a phony, artificially created prosperity to keep him from being smashed, yet he believes what he reads in his own newspapers—how mighty he is and how noble his motives.

Thanks for letting me put my two cents in.

Sanity the Watchword

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The opinions expressed by the various newspaper commentators leave one with mixed emotions. I believe it would be a good plan to muzzle many of these so-called specialists, and let the editors themselves analyze the news. Experts, as a rule, give most people a pain in the neck. Newspapers, on the whole, have some definite policy, but a large percentage of the columnists I frequently follow have no conception of what they are actually trying to convey. In these trying days sanity should be the watchward.

The average man in the street, no doubt, could suggest a plan for the solution of the present crisis in Europe. I recall one such man expressing the opinion that the League of Nations, or some other representative body, should set a value on the disputed territory, and, the terms being agreeable, turn it over to Germany for the stipulated amount.

Perhaps, from a military viewpoint, this would not set well with some of the great nations. Anyway, I still believe there never was a bad peace or a good war.

"Speaking of Betrayals"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Every once in a while, a newspaper brings out an editorial which should be framed in every household, and which each member of the family should read three times before breakfast.

Such is your "Speaking of Betrayals" on September 24, stating that the United States must shoulder the blame for a large and fundamental part of the responsibility for what is happening in Europe now.

The only trouble with that editorial is that it stops short of elucidating how much of the responsibility for the debacle is ours.

Over 150 years ago Adam Smith said: It has been the principal cause of the rapid progress of our American Colonies toward wealth and greatness, that almost their whole capital has been employed in agriculture. Were the Americans to stop the importation of European manufactures, and by giving a monopoly to such of their countrymen as could manufacture the like goods, divert any considerable portion of their capital into this employment, they would retard, instead of accelerating, the progress of their country toward real wealth and greatness."

By 1900, America had seized the manufacturing advantage, and to a considerable extent, the trading advantage; in 1914, Europe went to war over the declining remnant. Who caused the war? Who now rants at the dictators for establishing the same kind of self-sufficiency of which we were the principal exponents?

The world emerged from feudalism consequent upon the introduction of commerce and manufactures which, said Adam Smith, "gradually furnished the great proprietors with something for which they could exchange the whole surplus of their lands, and which they could consume themselves without sharing it either with tenants or 'retainers.'" The price of supplying the great proprietors with more commodities was secure possession of the land for the tenants and individual enterprise for the tradesmen and artificers. "Thus commerce and manufactures gradually introduced order and good government, and with them the liberty and security of individuals. The world's population doubled and doubled again, consequent upon the profits of world trade.

Governments are now taking the place of the feudal barons, all over the world, maintaining hordes of tenants and retainers with the products which they can no longer dispose of in world trade, and the inhabitants of those countries again live "in almost a continual state of war with their neighbors, and of servile dependency upon their superiors."

Our good Secretary of State has rightly discovered the gradual dilution of the golden elixir of world trade to be responsible for all present difficulties. King Canute tried to stop the rising tides of the sea; Mr. Hull essays to reverse the declining tides of world trade. The latter is rational. Could he only be successful!

America differs from Europe only in the matter of degree. What happens in Europe now will happen in this country, too, in due course. We are all part and parcel of the same economy, except as to degree of advantage.

OBSERVER.
Washington, Sept. 24.

"Wilson Was Right"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your recent editorial to the effect that the United States is largely to blame for the present international crisis is as true as it is convincing. Under the hysteria of a partisan election the United States failed to recognize its international obligations, and also failed to recognize its own selfish interest in the controversy, and wrecked, or at least invalidated, the League of Nations. I believe the intelligent and unemotional opinion of the United States believes this.

However, in your editorial, you write of "our" actions at the time, and of what "we" did then. Who are "we?" A majority of the relatively small proportion of our population voted against Woodrow Wilson. There is no doubt, however, that millions of Americans believed in Wilson's ideal. Everywhere I go I meet people who say now, "Wilson was right after all." Everywhere I go I meet people who say deliberately that our destinies parallel those of the British Empire. Everywhere I meet people who believe that we cannot stay out of another world war, and that we should not fail to take our place beside the other great democracies in the struggle between that form of government and the totalitarian form advocated by Hitler and Mussolini.

There are a number of "us" who treasure our blood connections with England, who are proud of "our" descent from Englishmen, Scots and Welsh. We may also be proud of "our" Irish blood, even though Ireland fought on the side of Germany so far as it could. We believe that the allies have not paid their just war debts because they could not do so, but we still feel that in a world struggle our place is with England and France.

We entered the last war partly for ideals, and partly in self-defense. In the coming struggle, which seems inevitable, we shall again be fighting for the ideal of democracy and also in self-defense. No one in his right mind believes that we can isolate ourselves unless we are content to surrender our sovereignty on the seas, our foreign trade, and unless we are content to see Fascism and Naziism invade the American continent.

Therefore, when I see a statement that the United States is overwhelmingly in favor of isolation, I doubt it. Who can speak for America? Certainly not Senator Borah or Senator Nye. They didn't speak for us in 1917, and they don't now. The American people do not want war, but they will face it if necessary. And they will have no illusions as to what they are fighting for.

This is the well-considered opinion of a native American who wants to keep America as it is, but who remembers his Anglo-Saxon heritage.

WAR VETERAN.

Underprivileged Nations

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: From the point of economic resources and a nation's wealth, which are the fundamental determining factors of individual welfare and the standard of living, are nations better off as small, or as large, countries.

Why do the latter fear and fight, to the death of thousands, the expansion of a smaller country like Germany? Why are these larger countries, having the evidence within their own borders that a country's wealth and resources are the foundations upon which they have builded a strong and healthy nation, reluctant and in many cases bitterly opposed to granting those same privileges to a smaller nation which cannot possibly have any other aim in mind than the welfare of its people?

Can it be that our fear of a larger Germany is based upon a guilty conscience? D. A. B.
Washington, Sept. 26.

For Principles Only

To the Editor of the Post.—Sir: A recent writer, in speaking of Germans, says, "They are bad neighbors, as anyone can testify who has lived in proximity to them." And he concludes that in event of another war a permanent army of occupation should be stationed in Germany.

Some never wanted to see the one that was there three years withdrawn. But let's not forget to fight for principles and not against personalities. When it comes to individuals, there's a deep saying—Everyone is as good as he can be under all the circumstances. It bears analysis. There were no greater heroes during the war than the German-Americans who went across and fought their own countrymen in behalf of democracy.

I know a litlte old German lady in this town whose door is darkened with the comings and goings of Washingtonians who are attracted there quite as much by her loving personality as by any service she renders. In whatever way we express ourselves let's keep our purpose motivated by the greatest power on earth—the love motif. That alone is constructive and enduring, and none are more sadly in need of it than those who have least to show toward others.

The U. S. Peace Plea

By Ernest Lindley

Second Message Is Likely

THE NATURE of the American interest in the European crisis was precisely stated by the President in his message to Chancellor Hitler, President Benes, and the governments of Great Britain and France. That interest is simply that the crisis should be resolved by peaceful means.

By implication, the President disavowed a vital American interest in the exact character of any territorial revision or other rearrangements that might result from a peaceful settlement. The United States is no more prepared now than it was when the Senate rejected the Treaty of Versailles to guarantee the preservation of the status quo in Europe.

But the United States is vitally interested in the method by which the territorial readjustments are brought about. It objects to the use of force, even when force does not lead to a major war. When the result may be a continental or world catastrophe, this moral interest must accordingly become acute. And with it is interwoven the realization that the United States cannot escape, in greater or lesser degree, the consequences of a general European war.

ON ITS FACE, the President's message was no more than a brief restatement of principles repeatedly voiced by him and Secretary Hull. If the armies of Europe march, what they believe to be a deep-seated conviction of the American people will at least have been expressed again—and in the form of a direct appeal to the parties most intimately involved in the crisis. The historical record will be clear.

But behind the appeal lay also a measure of hope that it might not be uttered in vain. As Europe has moved from one crisis to a worse one over a period of five years, the President and Secretary Hull repeatedly have sought means of exerting the influence of the United States in behalf of peace. Their efforts necessarily have been limited by the policy of non-entanglement in Europe to which American public opinion has tenaciously clung. The dozens of proposals pressed upon them by various groups of citizens either transgressed that prohibition or seemed to offer no practical basis whatsoever for intervention by the President in the affairs of Europe.

THE DOORS of the White House and State Department have never been closed, however, against suggestions of specific means by which the United States, within the framework of its established policy, might contribute to the peace of Europe. And there has been a quiet understanding in the upper circles of the Administration, that if Europe should really move to the threshold of war, a final appeal from the United States would be in order.

As long as the Sudeten question remained within the grasp of European diplomacy, there seemed to be no occasion for an appeal from the White House. The interest of the United States in the preservation of peace and its moral disapproval of "aggressors" had been made abundantly clear by the President and Mr. Hull. These utterances had been backed up by the pointed remainder of our diplomatic representatives abroad that no one could guarantee what our policy would be in the event of a general European war.

We might stay out indefinitely or we might eventually come in. When Great Britain and France, instead of maintaining a inflexible front, conceded, and forced Czechoslovakia to concede, the substance of Hitler's demands, there seemed to be all the less reason for the President to speak or act.

BUT ON SUNDAY the psychological moment—or the nearest to such a moment that could be expected—seemed to have arrived. The negotiations between Hitler and Prime Minister Chamberlain had broken down. Europe seemed to be moving irresistibly toward war. It had been announced that Hitler would speak on Monday. The President decided to make an appeal.

Among the handful of officials who had a hand in the framing of the message, some thought he should say less and some thought he should say more than he actually did. On the whole, the decision was in favor of a minimum utterance, simply reiterating the interest of the United States in peace and stating a legal basis, the Kellogg-Briand Pact, for the appeal.

IN LIMITING the scope of his message, the President may have been moved partly by caution. But there is at least a suggestion that he decided to hold something in reserve for a second appeal, if the circumstances seem auspicious. A hint of what might have been—or might be—incorporated in a more comprehensive message is contained in the first one. It appears in the emphasis on the fact that the United States "is caught in no mesh of hatred" and the strong implication that it has no objections, moral or otherwise, to the readjustment of boundaries by peaceful negotiation.

Thus, in addition to reemphasizing the moral views of the United States, the President seems to have prepared the way cautiously for another possible step. The next logical step would be a tender of good offices, not as a mediator responsible for the details of a settlement, but as a neutral party ready to assist in bringing the disputants into peaceful negotiation.

A Prophecy?

The whole thing leaves the average Britisher slightly bewildered.

He is dumbfounded by the sheer hypocricy of Nazis posing as the protectors of minority rights; he is astounded to perceive that when the smoke of the newest "bombshell" has abated the dictator concerned is triumphantly holding the spoils of his latest "smash and grab."

He knows that just as soon as the Sudeten business has been disposed of, the German foreign office will proceed with the next job of work, as per schedule.

It may be the further development of the "drive toward the east," or it may be a formal request for the colonial issue to be raised.

Whatever it is, the "put the dictators in their place" school will murmur indignantly once more; Americans will jibe afresh at British pusillanimity; the political mobsters will pull off another coup, and the "peace at any price" party will shrugs its shoulders and say, "but we have still avoided war!"

Lusty Scientist

REVIEWING LANCELOT Hogben's "Science for the Citizen" (Knopf, $5) is like reviewing the "Encyclopedia Britannica." Mr. Hogben makes the compendious H. G. Wells appear unambitious and amateurish. Abandoning the traditional divisions of knowledge into fenced pastures labeled "astronomy," "physics," "chemistry," "biology," "psychology," etc., Mr. Hogben ranges the entire world, all time and space, with a lust of battle in his eye and whole libraries of learning at his command. Those who have read "Mathematics for the Million" know how rampantly he escapes the dullness of the schoolrooms. He rides wild again in "Science for the Citizen."

Typical of the man is his explanation of his book. "I am rather lazy," he says, "that is to say, I prefer real work to writing." But Sir William Beveridge, director of the London School of Economics, asked him to give a general introduction to natural knowledge, and Hogben did in a hundred lectures, "which entailed an unconscionable amount of work" for the benefit of his 20 amazed listeners.

LIFE IN SOUTH AFRICA, Mr. Hogben explains, had completely unfitted his four children for "continuous incarceration in the sooty, squalid depression of the English metropolis." So he bought a cottage in Devon for his barefoot, daylight-conscious offspring, and himself moved into a flat two minutes from his office. Instead of spending 12 hours a week in exhausting strap-hanging, he had six hours a week of comfortable free time in the Southern Railway's third-class Pullmans. In them he wrote 2,500 typescript pages. Mr. Hogben confides that though he is no matinee idol and has a sheer genius for making enemies, he has a talent for getting himself liked by young men of promise. Three of his bright students torpedoed his type-script into notoriety. They fought with him to revise and publish his book. And he did.

One might attempt, in 15 or 20 newspaper columns, to note some of the subjects which Mr. Hogben treats. He begins with the ancient star-gazers, in the days when priests were the first scientists as well as the first civil servants, making those amazingly precise observations of the moon and stars which astonish and delight modern students of the Pyramids, of Stonehenge and of the Maya monuments. Mr. Hogben has a keen respect for the intellectual capacity of those prehistoric illiterates.

STILL OFTENER he gets around to Aristotle and Plato, whom he regards as the most dangerous metaphysicians of all time. They were idealists and mystics, anti-scientific in temper, and they have retarded mankind more than any modern can calculate. They probably are responsible for Hitler and Mussolini as well as for our shocking backwardness in the treatment of disease, in inventiveness and in the application of such little knowledge as we finally have succeeded in accumulating.

IN SOME FUTURE age realizations of which we hardly yet dream may become possible. Mr. Hogben thinks that the Soviet Union, with a planned national economy and a tremendous ice-bound coastline, may use the stored solar energy of the sea as a sort of perpetual boiler—the temperature of the Arctic air being in winter below the boiling point of ammonia, that of the water always above it. "The necessary supply of ammonia to replenish inevitable waste could be obtained as a by-product from a long overdue scheme to conserve the world's limited supply of phosphates now wasted by fouling the coastal waters with sewage."

I have turned all Mr. Hogben's 1,076 pages; I don't pretend to have read half of them in a day. They approximate, I should guess, the equivalent of four full college courses in the various sciences, and I never was good at physics. I take his scientific accuracy on faith. What most delights me in his book is the free play of a creative scientific imagination wandering restlessly away from mere data, and the brilliant English style, unmatched in scientific writing, I think, since the days of the great Huxley.

On The Record

By Dorothy Thompson

Two Voices Over Europe

IN THE LAST 36 hours we have heard two voices. Each of those voices was ominous. Each of those voices told the world an awful fact; namely, that unless something quite invisible in the picture at this moment occurs all of Europe will be plunged into war.

The first voice declared war. The second voice pleaded for peace. The first voice delivered an ultimatum. The second voice offered once again to take up the issue and to arbitrate it. The first voice shrieked and screamed to the accompaniment of a tom-tom of mechanized howls from a drilled mob—howls that seemed to come from the throats of 10,000 robots. The second voice had no accompaniment. A man stood alone and spoke.

• • • •

THE FIRST voice was very loud. The second voice was very quiet.

But the second voice was more ominous than the first.

For the first voice was unreason, and a vast cry of aggression, masking fear. And the second voice was reason, taking a last stand. It was a rather old voice, tired, confessing anxiety, confessing more, confessing horror. But it was calm, and it was sovereign.

MEN OF SCIENCE and men of reason are responsible for the fact that this war—if there will be war—broke out between two voices heard all over the globe. For the radio, the very symbol of man's inventiveness, of the closeness of each part of the world to the other, of the desire of human beings to communicate with each other, of the intimate integration of western civilization across all national boundaries, in the vast kingdom of the air, carried them.

Every person who heard the two voices, the two speeches, felt his heart warmed by one and repulsed by the other. Everything that makes a human being conscious and sentient forced a choice between one voice or the other: between Hitler's voice and words, and Chamberlain's.

Only, some people did not hear both voices. Seventy-five million people in Germany, for instance, with very few exceptions, heard only one.

THERE WAS A LINE in Hitler's speech which caught and held my attention. "No one has ever been able to reproach me with being a coward. I never was a coward. I have always been at the front with you all behind me. Even now I am leading, and you are following as one nation . . ."

Why did you say that, Mr. Hitler? Certainly no one has ever reproached you with being a coward. Before you spoke, 10,000 people howled their cheers to Dr. Goebbels, who promised that 75,000,000 Germans would follow you anywhere you chose to lead them.

You are the nation's hero. You stand on a pinnacle of power that no man in this century and few men in history have ever achieved.

Nobody has called you a coward in five years. You have known only adulation, only adoration, only blind obedience, only trusting faith. Why did you raise that question?

• • • •

YOU RAISED IT because someone very near to you had whispered that you were a coward. Someone who sleeps with you and wakes with you. His name is Adolf. Adolf Hitler.

True, you brushed that voice aside. True, you shrieked to high heaven in an attempt to drown it out. But in that shriek was a horrid scream of fear. People didn't have to know what you were saying to know that. And even your words could not obliterate that tearing, corrosive, wild anxiety.

Because the voice of Adolf Hitler was saying to Adolf Hitler: You do not dare to tell the German people the truth! You must deliberately confuse the issue. You must pretend that the ultimatum of Berchtesgaden and the ultimatum of Godesberg are one and the same thing.

You must not let the German people know that you are not fighting to liberate the Sudeten Germans, who had been promised to you already, not only by the "criminal Benes" but by France, and by Great Britain, on their words of honor.

You must make the German people think that nowhere have just demands met a conciliatory spirit!

You must leave the German people—the puzzled, anxious, peace-desiring German people, who are hermetically sealed against information from the outside world—in the belief that they were about to embark on a little adventure, an isolated war!

• • • •

You knew, Mr. Hitler, that Russia was mobilizing, that Britain was mobilizing, that France was mobilizing. You knew that Poland was wavering, that Yugoslavia and Rumania had declared that they would support Czechoslovakia in the event of an attack on her by Hungary, and that, therefore, Hungary was out of the picture. You were not even deadly sure of your great friend, Mussolini, who is a realist.

And you did not dare to tell the German people this!

DELIBERATELY, you confused the issue. Deliberately you suppressed the facts. Deliberately, you lied. Deliberately, you raked up 20 years of history to justify yourself, to spin out the time, to cover up the real facts, the terrifying facts, the fateful and fatal facts.

Why, Mr. Hitler? Why were you afraid to tell the truth to the German people? You were afraid of the truth, Mr. Hitler. Terribly, terribly afraid.

Because you knew that if the German people knew the truth they would rise to no mechanical tomtoms, but they would rise again as people, as human beings, with a right to life, to liberty, to knowledge, with a right to be men and not blind automatons, with a right to have homes to live in, and wives to love, and children to cherish, and gay cities, and plowed fields—and for the love of Germany they would sweep you into the ashcan of history.

Yes, Mr. Hitler, you are a coward. No one in your audience, perhaps, knew it, but you knew it.

THE PRIME MINISTER of Great Britain did not say he was no coward, he said he was afraid of war. "It seems impossible that a quarrel which is already settled in principle should be the subject of war. I can well understand why the Czechoslovak government have felt unable to accept the terms which have been put before them in the German memorandum . . .

"I was taken completely by surprise when I got back to Germany and found that Hitler insisted that the territory should be handed over immediately and immediately occupied by German troops; that our previous arrangements of safeguarding the people within the territory who were not Germans or who did not want to join the German Reich was rejected." With amazing understatement, the prime minister said, "I find this attitude unreasonable."

But immensely ominous were the simple words, "if I were convinced that any nation had made up its mind to dominate the world by fear of its force, I should feel that it must be resisted."

• • • •

AND THERE lies the issue.

But the German nation has not made up its mind, the German nation cannot make up its mind. The German nation has no mind. The German nation has a "Fuehrer," who is its single mind, its single will, and who on Monday was afraid to tell the German nation the truth.

Falls Church Gives Up PWA School Loan

Won't Ask Grant Now Have Requested Survey Will Await Report

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST,
P. O. BOX 268, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Falls Church 2882-M.

The Falls Church school board and town council school committee have announced they will abandon efforts to secure a PWA loan for erection of a new school at present. The announcement was made following a conference between Horace E. Brown and Samuel H. Styles, of the town school board; Paul Ferris and Clarence L. Shotwell, of the special town council school committee, and Superintendent W. T. Woodson, of Fairfax County.

Last summer, town authorities requested the State board of education to appoint a special commission to make a survey of the school needs of the town and until this survey has been made the town school board has decided it cannot formulate a building program. Superintendent Woodson stated he believed the commission will be appointed and meet within the next month.

An impression of Buck Thomas by James Montgomery Flagg

A Name of Fine Traditions since 1788

Buck Thomas is a well traveled man. But he didn't have to travel far to discover the secret of being a popular host!

"Learn to treat yourself right! That's Rule No. 1!" says Buck. "To be a graceful 'treater' of others, learn to order your own meat and drink wisely and well!

"In choosing a whiskey, consider its ancestry! I went for Carstairs because of the high traditions back of its name. The Carstairs family have been making fine business history since Washington's day. And the present Carstairs Whiskey keeps faith with the time-honored Carstairs standards of integrity."

The Carstairs at your package store or bar today is a blend of several illustrious whiskies. And it's a blend of character, too. Character that gives you deep, mellow flavor with delicate bouquet. Rich, full taste with light body. Character for the Man who Cares!

"The name "Buck Thomas" is not intended to refer to any specific individual; but merely to a type; the type of "man who cares."

Sabu, the 'Elephant Boy,' Prefers Automobiles!

Indian Lad Pays Capital Brief Visit
Famous Director Also Here
Notes of the Theater World

THE "Elephant Boy" has graduated from his original means of transportation and now prefers the motor car. He has abandoned the slow-moving Jumbos in favor of the speedy jalopies—the speedier the better. His favorite rate of travel is 93 miles per hour—the fastest he ever has done on the ground—but he is not wholly discontented when his car drags along at 70. Anything under 50 m. p. h. is practically standing still.

BELL.

This, however, is only one respect in which Sabu, star of "Elephant Boy" and soon to be seen in the stellar role of Alexander Korda's Technicolor production of "Drums," has "caught on" to the ways of the Western world since his comparatively recent transplantation from India to London. At a luncheon in his honor, tossed yesterday in the Washington Hotel at 1 by Carter Barron, divisional manager for Loews, Inc., Sabu revealed an astonishing ability to adapt himself to the customs and even the speech of the country in which he happens to be at the moment. He already is well along in his mastery of the American vernacular, and all of his English has been acquired within a period of two years; since his arrival in London not too many months ago, he has learned ice skating, tennis, swimming, horseback riding, table tennis and a few other sports he had never heard of as an apprentice "hostler" in the elephant stables of the Maharajah of Mysore, in his native India.

When not engaged in making pictures—and so far he has made them only at the rate of one a year—this bright-eyed and precocious youngster of 14 attends private school in England. His contract with Alexander Korda calls for the payment of all living expenses while away from India. His salary is velvet. He saves it all, against the time when his screen usefulness will have come to an end and he may return to India to impart to his fellow-countrymen something of the quality of life enjoyed in England and America.

He told me yesterday in a chat of some length that what he really would like to be "when he grows up" is a mechanical engineer. He likes to tinker around automobiles and thinks it would be fun to manufacture low-priced cars in India that would cost less than those imported from this country and go twice as fast. Airplanes, he feels, are a little too big an order for him at just this time. He didn't like his first trip in the air and quite frankly admits that he would rather ride an elephant than fly.

Since his arrival in this country about a month ago, Sabu has got around a bit. He spent two full days in Hollywood on a transcontinental trek and while there played tennis, went swimming, did some skating and went to the fights. He didn't care greatly for the fisticuffing because "just as soon as one of the fighters broke the other fellow's nose and it began to bleed, he would hit him right on the nose again." There seems to be a streak of compassion in the youngster's nature.

Between these sporting events, of course, he found time to visit the studios and meet many of the picture stars. By the glint in his eye, the smile that illumines his handsome young features and the enthusiasm that bubbles out of his every pore at mention of her name, one gathers that Carole Lombard, to him, was "the hit of the show." I told you the boy is smart!

Sabu is anxious to sail back to London in about a week and get to work on his next picture, which probably will be an English remake of "The Thief of Bagdad."

Nice boy, Sabu, exactly the same off as he is on the screen in every consideration of personal appearance and demeanor—except that he is a normal lad of 14, who probably would much prefer being out on an open lot romping with a gang of other kids of his own age to being on display at even the most informal of press lunches.

• • • •

Sabu was accompanied on his brief visit to the Capital yesterday by Lynn Farnol, in charge of advertising and publicity for United Artists; Morris Helprin, personal representative of Alexander Korda, and his Sikh bodyguards, two swarthy and bewhiskered natives of the Punjab in the picturesque costume of their land. Although Sabu otherwise was dressed in Occidental garb, he, too, wore a red turban that it takes 40 minutes to wind on his head. Once on, it remains there all day. The party arrived by Eastern Air Lines plane at 11:20 a. m., had a half-hour audience with Mrs. Roosevelt, at the White House, and left Washington at 3 for a glimpse of Baltimore. Thursday, Sabu will be back in New York for the opening of "Drums" at Radio City Music Hall, where it has been booked for two weeks.

The English-mutton-chop-with-curry luncheon, celebrating the presence in our city of Sabu, was only the beginning of the day's goings-on for the drama desks. At 4 p. m., under the same auspices, a cocktail party was heaved in compliment to Sam Wood, noted motion picture director, Mrs. Wood and their daughter, Katherine Stevens, currently appearing in the role of Alice Sycamore in "You Can't Take It With You," at the National Theater.

Sam Wood is one of the real veterans of his craft. His experience behind the megaphone dates to the early days—and I mean early—when Charlie Chaplin was making single-reelers for Essanay and Hal Roach was just launching Harold Lloyd in the original "Lonesome Luke" series of short-reel comedies. From that primitive beginning, Mr. Wood has progressed with the industry through the popular Wallace Reid series of feature productions and the direction of practically all of the famous stars of the cinema—House Peters, Blanche Sweet, Marion Davies, Wallace Beery, Gloria Swanson, Jackie Coogan, Norma Shearer and all the rest—to the present parade of distinguished releases emanating from the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer lot in Culver City, Calif.

It was Mr. Wood who directed "Navy Blue and Gold," the Marx Brothers in "A Night at the Opera" and "A Day at the Races," and "Madame X," to name only a few of his recent successes. He recognizes no such thing as "temperament" in an actor. If he detects any of the preliminary symptoms of this artistic malady, he kids the victim out of it before it gets fairly started. And he likes to work with children and juvenile players. That is a taste which probably had its genesis in the direction of Jackie Coogan 'way back yonder in "Peck's Bad Boy," for which he also wrote the story.

In the estimation of this astute student of the screen, the motion picture industry lost its one authentic genius in the death of the late Irving Thalberg, who combined with an uncanny sense of story and productional values a tremendous capacity for "getting along" with people.

Mr. Wood's most recent production is "Stablemates," starring Wallace Beery, with Mickey Rooney in the role of secondary importance. Master Rooney, he thinks, is a great little guy who also happens to be a fine actor. According to Mr. Wood, Mickey isn't such a smart-aleck young fellow as he has been painted. It is merely that the studio keeps him so busy that he has no time to play, away from the lot, and so does his skylarking on the set.

It is exhilarating to meet so sane and well-balanced a gentleman as Sam Wood. The industry would be better off with more of him.

Although few would have guessed it from the front of the house, Katherine Stevens, Mr. Wood's charming, blonde daughter, was making her first metropolitan stage appearance at the National Monday night. The play was rehearsed only a week and she confesses to that "sort of gone" feeling suffered by all capable players on a first night, upon her first entrance. But it lasted only through the first speech.

Miss Stevens, as I have said, never has been on the stage before, but has appeared briefly in some of her father's pictures. She was, for example, some of the decorative "atmosphere" in "Navy Blue and Gold." She admits with delightful candor that her father is her best friend and severest critic, but evens the score by stating in the same breath that she also is his.

The Wood family will be together in Washington for several days — barring the arrival of that bugaboo of all Hollywood personalities playing hooky from the home lot, a wire calling Mr. Wood back to begin work on his next picture.

At least, the summons back to work is expected to be delayed sufficiently to permit the director to view a finished print of "Stablemates," which he has never seen. A special print is being flown to Washington today for his especial benefit, to be run off in the private projection room of the Twentieth Century-Fox Film Exchange this afternoon at 2. It will be preceded by a preview screening of that intensely controversial picture, "The Birth of a Baby," at the same place at 12:30 p. m. The drama desks of the local press have been invited to attend both.

"The Birth of a Baby," incidentally, will be publicly presented in this city, at the Rialto Theater, beginning October 5, which is by way of being a Wednesday. This column declines to commit itself further than it already has with regard to the propriety of showing this subject in the commercial theater until after it has viewed it with its own eyes. More of this later.

reading in the usual direction, as they will be seen in the principal roles in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's elaborate picturization of "The Great Waltz." The compositions of Johann Strauss form the musical background of this pretentious subject. Miliza Karjus is a new importation, from Vienna, as is Julien Duvivier, the French director of the picture.

New York, Sept. 27.

JOHN L. LEWIS: Two major American industries will sign collective bargaining contracts this month—the first result of the Roosevelt committee's report on British labor . . . Dick Merrill: Roscoe Turner, America's champion plane-racer, will retire from competition this year. He'll start building racing planes and will test them—for younger fliers.

ADOLF HITLER: Joe Jacobs, manager of Max Schmeling, sent him a birthday cable yesterday. In return Max cabled Joe his usual "Rosh Hashana" greetings—from Berlin!

GROVER WHALEN: That time-capsule buried at the World's Fair Grounds, to be dug up in the year 6939, contained every modern device. But somebody forgot to include a radio . . . Margaret Mitchell: Milton Vaughn, the Savoy-Plaza elevator boy who was signed for the movie version of "Gone With the Wind," returned from Hollywood and is back at his old job. He still has his contract—but all he's been able to get out of it is a new hair comb . . . Herbert Bayard Swope: The Saints and Sinners Club will induct a new member soon—a horse. The animal is Man o' War.

EDWARD JOHNSON: James Melton, the radio singer who made his opera debut in "Madame Butterfly" last week, was coached, in this new job by Lawrence Tibbett—who now hopes to get him into the Met . . . Vito Marcantonio: Lionel Stander, the screen actor, is rushing from Hollywood to New York to help in your Congressional campaign . . . Burgess Meredith: The screen version of "Young Man With a Horn," in which you'll be starred, is being written by John O'Hara, novelist.

MAYOR LaGUARDIA: Newbold Morris, president of your city council, is a member of the Racquet and Tennis Club, one of New York's swankiest organization. Its oldest member is a man named Cook—who is 100 years old . . . On his 100th birthday, the Racquet and Tennis Club tendered a dinner in Cook's honor and presented him with (1) a traveling bag (2) a life membership!

FRED STONE: Your daughter, Paula, auditioned for a singing role in a new Warner picture last night. She auditioned via long-distance telephone, singing into a receiver in the office of Al Siegel, the voice coach now at the Casa Manana. She sang to the Warner production staff, listening in Hollywood.

SECRETARY OF TREASURY MORGENTHAU: Federal Prosecutor Amen, who convicted Gurrah Shapiro, collected $13,000 of the fine for the Government last month by levying on the defendant's property.

NEWSPAPER GUILD: Many years ago Norman Anthony started a magazine, Film Fun, and left it to start Ballyhoo. Anthony recently joined the Dell Publishing Co. A few days ago Dell absorbed another magazine and assigned Anthony to edit it. The magazine is Film Fun . . . Esme O'Brien: Your parents will ship you off to Bermuda—to take you away from stage offers . . . Tommy Dorsey: The new swimming pool you're building at your Bernardsville, N. SAMUEL SEABURY: This week the Appellate Division will review the Metropolitan Life Insurance case regarding the rights of agents to organize. At the trial before Justice Steuer, you, as counsel for the company, quoted Lenin and Stalin as supporting such measure—and that therefore it must be wrong . . . Your opponent, Louis Boudin, replied: "I can't quote Lenin or Stalin—but I will quote the U. S. Supreme court" . . . Perhaps you're not aware of it—but Boudin is the only living American ever quoted by Lenin as an expert on the Marxian philosophy.

JUDGE K. M. LANDIS: Jimmy Foxx, the ball player, was in Lindy's last night, took three chocolate cigars from the counter, and paid. "Wait a moment," he was told. "Those cigars aren't real. They're candy" . . . "I know," Jimmy replied. "I don't smoke" . . . Max Gordon: Congratulations to you, Harold Rome and Charles Friedman—for "Sing Out the News." I've never seen a better revue . . . Heifetz Stars In Unwritten Film Play

Sound Track First Will Make Story Fit Process Is Novel

By Frederick C. Othman.

Hollywood, Sept. 27 (U.P.).—Jascha Heifetz held a tea for the press on sound stage one of the United Artists Studios at 4:15 p. m., so that the members of the fourth estate could hear him play his fiddle.

We got our wires crossed, somehow, and showed up two hours early, to find the great violinist unincumbered by violin, tea, or reporters—and to run across one of the strangest stories yet about movie making. It's in four parts, thus:

1. Heifetz is the star of Samuel Goldwyn's forthcomin., production, "The Restless Age."

2. Heifetz refuses to act in the picture and so has specified in his contract.

3. Nobody, not even Goldwyn, knows what the picture's going to be about, though Heifetz has been working in it for a week.

4. Production of the picture already has cost well over $100,000, despite the fact that none of the actors—since Heifetz isn't one—yet has been chosen.

Is Violinist, Not Actor

The tall, almost bashful Heifetz reported that all he'd done was record on sound track and picture film his playing of assorted music, from the classics to semi-popular ditties.

"I did that," he said, "to give the producers a wide selection of music because they apparently haven't made up their minds yet what kind of tunes they want. I understand the film will be shot next spring and by then I'll be out on concert tour."

Heifetz added that he was a violinist, not an actor, and that he had no illusions about his manly beauty.

"So all I do is play my violin, just like I always do," he said. "If they want to take my picture while I'm doing it, okay, but I'm still Heifetz, the fiddler, and not some character out of a book."

When we arrived on the scene a third-rate symphony orchestra rested between scenes. The business of an inferior band accompanying one of the world's greatest violinists was a little complicated, but Heifetz explained.

Costly Accompaniment

"I started work a week ago recording my numbers," he said. "I was accompanied by a 78 piece orchestra, composed of the finest musicians in the West and conducted by Alfred Newman. We played in our shirtsleeves and worked hard, to get the best music we could. We had to pay the members of the orchestra up to $30 an hour, each. That made my accompaniment cost around $8,000 a day.

"So when we got all the music recorded, I then had to accompany myself for the picturization. This meant that I had to get dressed in my full dress suit, and I had to have an orchestra all dressed up, too. Only it didn't matter whether the picture orchestra could play very well, or not."

Goldwyn therefore assembled another orchestra, composed of actors who also were musicians, and who worked for only $25 a day. This more than halved the cost of the band for the picture sequences. So when you see the film, you'll be hearing plu-perfect musicians, but you'll be watching fiddlers whose sour notes don't matter.

Heifetz, himself, appears throughout. He doesn't mind. He's getting more than $60,000 for the chore. And if Goldwyn can round up some actors, and concoct a story to fit the music, this oddest story we've heard so far in Hollywood should turn out okay.

Joan Davis Earns 'Tail Spin' Role

Joan Davis, Hollywood's premiere comedienne, drew another prize assignment from Darryl F. Zanuck, 20th Century-Fox production chief.

As a reward for her splendid work in "My Lucky Star" with Sonja Henie and Richard Greene and in "Hold That Co-Ed," Joan has been assigned a stellar role in "Tail Spin," the air drama soon to go into production at the studio.

The rollicking feminine funster will play the role of "Babe" in the picture, a story dealing with the adventures and tragedies of that small group of young women who have helped make aviation history.

the two ebullient young men from the Hollywood studios, who are winning new friends by the good-natured tomfoolery of their week of personal appearances as coheadliners of the current vaudeville bill at the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Cal., Sept. 27.—Was I lucky at the Motion Picture Pageant at the coliseum? Before 70,000 fans I rode with Gene Autry, a tremendous favorite. The Boy Scouts went hoarse over him. Gene is just back from another personal appearance tour. The most memorable thing that happened was at Kenton, Ohio, which boasts a population of 7,000. Six hundred people came to see him in one day.

HEDDA HOPPER

The mayor made a speech, saying, "We wish to thank you publicly, Mr. Autry, for giving our citizens employment."

The Gene Autry pistols are manufactured there. They've turned out over a million since the first of the year. They sell for 50 cents apiece.

Bob Burns brought his bazooka and played a tune for Eddie Robinson's five-year-old hopeful, who said, "More please."

"I guess they don't become critics until they're seven," Bob said. Burns is sorry he ever became a writer. Has a week off to go fishing, but has to deliver six columns before listening to them gurgle.

Eddie Cantor showed us a wire from his daughter, off honeymooning, wanting the family to know she misses them but what she said was, "Even though you and Mama aren't here, I'm having a wonderful time."

Jack Benny spoke up and said, "And when mine is old enough to be married, I'll be pushing up daisies."

Lionel Barrymore, after a difficult day of long speeches, which covered five pages, on "Doctor Kildare," started to ponder over day's work. So he called Director Harry Bouquet from home and said, "Did I do those scenes all right? Maybe we'd better do them again in the morning." Maybe that's the reason he remains at the top of his profession.

Ran into director Joe Von Sternberg, who's been drafted to do a bit of work on "The Great Waltz."

All nations have had a hand in that one. If they're not careful it will be known as "Metro's Folly." Von Sternberg told me he has a great acting part for Hedy LaMarr in her next picture. He wants to scream every time he hears the word glamour.

"I thought you invented that," I said.

"You're wrong, it was a smart press agent, and the word has been over-glamourized."

Chico Marx tried to crash the "Dramatic School" set even with a "No Visitors" sign on the door, but he didn't make it. Just wanted to see his daughter who's in it under the name of Robin Page.

June's Narrow Escape

June Travis nearly had her eye put out in "Little Orphan Annie" when a sudden gust of wind thrust the rib of a beach umbrella into it.

Gail Page has started a fan club among players for Mike Curtiz. I'd like to join, Gail.

While J. Edgar Hoover and Shirley Temple were being photographed at the Vendome, Mrs. Temple said, "Isn't it too bad children ever have to grow up."

A waiter nearly dropped dead when Gertie Lawrence asked for something fattening. All she ate for lunch was cottage cheese and pineapple, corned beef, cabbage, boiled potato and a dish of prunes.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Anguished by Husband's Confession of Love for Another Woman, Invalid Wife Asks Advice

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Some seven years ago I married a widower with two children, then aged 9 and 10. He was 33 and I was 28. We established a home in a Southern State, but he was given a position in Baltimore, whereupon we left the children with relatives and moved there, thinking the transfer was to be temporary. After a few months I became ill of arthritis, which developed into heart trouble. As a semi-invalid, I did not take the children again.

My husband seemed devoted, but drank to excess at times. . . . Three years ago he accepted a job in Washington and has since been here. Because of the climate, I have been obliged to spend the summers in Florida . . . The blow fell when I returned home last week. He didn't seem glad to see me and complained of everything. He continued to act strangely. He was out until 2 a. m. on three different nights and came home smelling of liquor.

Finally he confessed he was in love with another woman who knows all about me. I asked if he wished a divorce, and he said he wasn't sure yet; that he wants me to continue with him and let things shape their course. This seems hard to do. I love him and am physically unable to do hard work. I couldn't possibly hold any kind of position, although I was once a saleslady . . . He shows me some kindness, but only because he pities me a little, I guess.

I must be a fool to continue loving him in spite of all this. I lie awake at night and cry. I can't eat or sleep. My heart is hurting much more. I feel as if my life is finished. I think if I were brave enough, I would end it all. Please help me. TORTURED.

The Saving Attitudes

DEAR TORTURED: There's no use crying over spilled milk. Look facts in the face and make the most of what you have. Your husband is no less a victim of circumstances in this instance than you are. It is not in the nature of the average man to remain faithful either to a hopelessly invalided wife or to an absentee, half-time wife—and when, as in this case, you have a wife who falls in both classifications and a husband whose nature was none too stable to begin with (as witness his periodic alcoholic excesses) it is well-nigh inevitable that another woman should enter the picture sooner or later. Indeed, it is rather remarkable that she has been as long as seven years in coming, and for that we may give your husband some credit without condoning in the least his failure to keep faith with the letter and spirit of his marriage vows.

From the time your chronic illness was established, and particularly after it seemed imperative that you spend your summers away from your husband, about the best that could have been hoped for—and that yet may be achieved—was the substitution, in the place of full-bodied marital love, of a loyally devoted friendship which took account of the hazards implicit in a situation so cruelly unfair to both and wisely prepared neither to expect the impossible nor to fret at the inevitable slow death of romance.

companionship; the creature comforts of a well-run home; the absorbing, diverting, steadying society of his own children; and the comfortable, complex sense of peace, purpose, stability and local consequence which accrues to the man whose family life follows a normal social pattern.

Denied these things, is it any wonder that he (being the type of man he is) should have turned to some willing "other woman" for consolation during your perennial absence? I think you must agree with me that it isn't; that you must see you have been a little on the blind and smug side in taking his devotion so entirely for granted, and that you must admit you are being extremely selfish in pitying yourself alone in this regrettable denouement.

If you will stop sniveling and make use of what remains, you have considerable to build on and with. His kindly gestures, the fact that he seems to pity you a little; the fact that "he wants (you) to continue with him and let things shape their course," show a willingness on his part to save the marriage, if it can be saved and if you will co-operate. They show that his love for the other woman has not yet completely destroyed his sense of obligation toward you. Far from being a fool for continuing to love him, you would be something of an ingrate—all things considered—if you didn't. But you are a fool for acting like a cry-baby in a crisis which calls for rational adult behavior above all else.

If you will snap out of your anguished self-pity and give more thought to your husband's side of the picture you may experience a growth in understanding that will save the situation. Consider the fact that he has been giving you full support, with no doubt expensive medical attention beside, and getting little or nothing in return of what the average husband expects and receives from marriage — namely, buoyant wifely

Be a realist. Deal with the situation as it is and not as you would like it to be, or fondly deluded yourself that it was. Get a physician's help in bringing your hysteria under control; in remedying insomnia; in restoring appetite. Forgive your husband—from the heart. Show some understanding of and sympathy with his predicament—torn between love and duty. Show genuine appreciation of his past kindnesses to you; his present concern for you; his future good intentions toward you. Show your indestructible, needful love of him—the most moving of all claims to his continued protection, if gallantly and sincerely (rather than weepingly and wailingly) spoken.

Love, forgiveness, sympathy, friendliness, trust, gratitude, appreciation—such attitudes as these are required to save your marriage, your health and your sanity now. Bitterness, reproaches, self-pity, any exaggerated gestures of anguish, if indulged in now, will tear at the foundations of all three. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Molyneux Is Featuring Three Evening Types

Paris (U.P.).—Evening silhouettes at the house of Molyneux fall into three classes; the straight classical type; a new "old-fashioned" silhouette with a low decollete and a high puffed sleeve reaching not quite to the wrist—such as Toulouse-Lautrec painted; and a third evening line essentially crinoline, although the wired fullness does not start until the skirt has already come tightly down over the hips.

Materials are quilted both for daytime coats and evening coats. Plain black velvet evening dresses are worn under coats lined in brilliant satin quilting.

Hand Knits for Night and Day

ALTHOUGH knitting needles once clicked over nothing more glamorous than husbands' socks, they are being used to more artful advantage these days. The models, above, photographed at a recent local fashion showing, prove that knits take to the night as well as to active sportswear. The two-piece suit, left, is of pink cashmere down, the plain stitched gored skirt contrasting with its ribbed blouse. Incredibly soft is the white angora bolero, right, so simply styled that it is at home over severe dinner gowns as well as with daytime frocks.

Larger Women Glory In Svelte Knitted Frocks

Local Showing Reveals Progress in Art Molded Styles No Longer Reserved for Small Simple Stitches Used in Pleated Skirts

By Marshall Adams.
The Post Fashion Editor.

KNITTING NEEDLES have been flying at a great pace within the last few years, to the glorification of the feminine figure. What with the impetus given this pastime by the First Lady, industrious film stars and debutantes, knitting has developed into a profitable, pleasant occupation definitely out of the just-for-fun class. The extensive use to which needles and fine yarns have been put was evident at a showing of hand knits presented by a local store recently.

Every type of knitted garment was in evidence, from simple hand-purled sweaters to evening accessories of decided sophistication. In the realm of modest little sweaters and skirts, some striking developments have been knitted out. Downy slip-ons of cashmere and zephyr-weight yarns were shown, along with chaste one-piece shirtwaist frocks.

One hand knitted frock in particular was so distinctive because of it's lack of adornment that it found particular favor with needlers. It was of snowflake yarn in cool beige, its high neckline and long sleeves perfectly plain. The only trimming was a cowhide belt and two pairs of zippered pockets knitted into the dress.

Although tailored suits are usually thought of in terms of cheviots or worsteds, a number of outstanding suit designs had been contrived with the aid of needles. Some of them sponsored patterned stitches for jackets or boleros with the simplest possible stitch being used for the gored or pleated skirts.

One long-sleeved belted jacket contrasted a monotone gray skirt with heavy diamond stitches for the topper. Ribs, chevrons and herringbone stitches proved to be only a few of the popular patterns.

The vogue for knitted lumberjackets, wide flaring skirts and other voluminous bulky fashions has been kind on little women and on those who desire filling out in spots, but the taller woman has shied away from such designs in the past, fearing that hips or bust would be over-emphasized.

All such misgivings were proved groundless in this recent knit showing, for the draped afternoon frock has finally been achieved for the larger figure. A light-as-air yarn was utilized in one chic molded frock of black, its lines as svelte as those of any crepe or silk jersey. Rhinestones sparkled at the neckline and around the girdle to give it a party air.

How Esophagus, Stomach Aid in Digestive Process

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

After digestion in the mouth cavity there is an irresistible impulse to swallow the bolus of food. The muscles in the back of the pharynx seize it and propel it into the upper part of the esophagus.

Normally the passage through the esophagus to the stomach is made with lightning-like rapidity. When seen under the X-ray the food moves so fast that the eye can hardly follow it. Sometimes, however, there occurs a functional obstruction due to spasm of the muscle at the inlet to the stomach. The muscle is known as the cardia, and the condition is called cardiospasm.

The stomach is essentially a preparatory chamber in the process of digestion. The food is mixed there, churned up and delivered slowly to the intestine, in quantities just sufficient not to tax it to capacity.

The stomach juice is acid due to the secretion of hydrochloric acid from the gastric walls. The acid prepares protein food by hydrolysis for efficient intestinal digestion.

Absorption hardly occurs in the stomach at all. Water passes right through the stomach as if in a trough even though the stomach is full of food. Even when we are very thirsty we have to wait until water gets into the intestines to be absorbed. But this is very soon. Alcoholic beverages and some drugs are absorbed in the stomach.

Since its work is so largely preliminary to digestion, the stomach could be removed without greatly interfering with the digestive process. Surgical operations are therefore done in the stomach with considerable impunity. Complete atrophy of the stomach wall can occur and digestion goes on just the same. But in such cases another function of the body suffers—blood formation—because the stomach secretes a substance which, combined with the food, prevents anemia. This substance, however, can easily be supplied in artificial form.

The kind of food for stomach complaints will be considered tomorrow.

Beauty

Miss Shearer's Beauty Made, Not Born

Likes to Exercise Judicious About Food Carriage Is Good

By Ida Jean Kain.

WE DO NOT usually come right out and admit it, but feminine nature is apt to resent the arrogant beauty who was born that way and has never had to do anything about her looks. The beauty we warm up to is the one who started out with one or two flaws and who has come through to a flying finish. Like Norma Shearer. . . .

Miss Shearer is so breathtakingly lovely that it is hard to believe she was not born beautiful. Her beauty is an evolution, however, for this star has grown more fascinating year by year. When anything like that happens, the only possible explanation is that the beauty in question is largely self-made. Certainly this is true of Norma Shearer. She has done so much for herself that as a personality she is an inspiration to everyone of us.

In the first place, this actress is short. She is only an inch over five feet tall, but to compensate for her lack of inches Miss Shearer has the most regal posture in the films. When I asked her to tell us how she does it, she said, "Let's see. I think I like the feeling of chest up. It seems to give me a lift."

Good Carriage Rare

She also thinks it highly important that posture should be relaxed, since tension is tiring, but she observed. . . . "I think one should stand up and use the right muscles so that perfect posture is natural."

Only about one woman out of every 50 has a good carriage, and your first step toward beauty may be the correction of your posture.

Miss Shearer's perfect figure is no accident, either. In Canada, as a young girl, she went in for all sports and believes that every teen age girl should play at a variety of games instead of trying to excel at one—unless it is to be a career.

This idea of play is carried over into exercise, and you might be surprised to see the first lady of Hollywood turning cartwheels, but she does. Her exercises are "not the kind that make you strong, but the kind that make you supple." Her waistline is kept down to a mere 24½ inches with daily exercises—of the kind you can't be bothered with. She likes to stand up and stretch, and turn and twist and flop, and believes that the simple waist circling exercises with arms stretched high overhead are best of all for the midsection. She also walks on the beach, swims and plays tennis.

Loves Soap and Water

This star never has to diet, because she has the right slant on food: "It is easy to cultivate an appetite for the foods that make for strength rather than fat. If you indulge yourself in rich foods and sweets, those are the ones you want."

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

THE MINUTE Labor Day is over, and the humidity and humility collapse together, the dinner gowns and jackets are yanked from the moth-balls, and what is snickeringly known as New York's Night Life begins. I am in no sense a real part of this faintly ridiculous scene, but I do have my moments, and it is my business to report on the exhibitionistic didoes which go on from 8 p.m. to 4 a.m.

ALICE HUGHES.

Well, the rocet has gone up and the shods are on. The two titans of the Broadway trade, the International Casino and Master Billy Rose's Casa Manana, move into high, and so does that smoky shambles called the Paradise, home of most of the cutest cuties. The Big Three of swank supper spots—"21," The Stork, and El Morocco—will be busier than ever if money is loose. Of course, you need a letter from your pastor to get into these gilded dumps at the stylish hour of 12. The insane spots of 52nd Street, "Swing Alley"—Leon and Eddie's and Jack White's Club 18—are crammed with morose, dead-panned funmakers eluding the tomb.

There is little new to report, so far. The Cuban Rhumba influence is expected to persist. Jack Dempsey and Jim Braddock still run their enormous saloons for visiting daddies who like steaks, chops and a sight of a couple of retired fighters. Two new joints are in full swing. One is a Broadway branch of the famous McGinnis who has served glorious shore dinners out at Sheepshead Bay these many years. The grub is fine. And NTG, or Nils Granlund, has started a Scandinavian beanery called The Midnight Sun, where the Swedish food and the assorted girls are both tasty. Gosh, maybe this piece is not for Mother, but Father.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—In the heat and horror of the Czech situation (Goodness knows what happens as this is printed!) I had a postcard some days ago from my colleague, Mildred Sydell of the Atlanta Georgian. On one side was a picture of the historic powder tower, and on the other side this message—"Greetings from Prague, where calm meets excitement." That, as I say, was mailed August 31. But what now? Gone for thousands of Americans are Berlin, Vienna, Prague—every one a beloved city. What next, in this tragic world?

Onto my messy desk tumbles still another gadget—a ring which holds a cigarette in a loop on its top. Made of silver or solid gold, it is worn on the little finger when not in use, and then on the first joint of the pointing finger when carrying a coffin-nail. Some even are jooled. Just the thing for the smartest gal on the block. . . .

'Such Lovely Neighbors'

I

"GOOD MORNING . . . May I use your phone a minute? . . . Oh, I'm sorry! I didn't know you were still at breakfast . . . We always get up so early at our house . . . no, no, now don't get up, I won't be but a minute. I can't imagine what's the matter with our phone—it's perfectly dead—unless George forgot to pay the bill again.

"Now you all go right on eating, it won't disturb me a bit . . . Go right on with your eggs, Mr. Guppey, I know how men are about their breakfast . . . I won't be any time at all. I just got to order some groceries . . . and get some things at the drug store . . . and call about my wave set . . . and I suppose I ought to call Lutie while I'm here.

"Now you just all go on—say just a minute! I hate to be such a bother, but I forgot my glasses. I wonder if somebody could tell me what this telephone number is?"

II

Oh, I'm sorry—I just thought I'd come to the back door so it wouldn't be any trouble. What? Paint? . . . No, it's just on my hand, but I'm afraid I smeared everything . . . Well, I hate to cause you all that trouble—if you've just got a little turpentine — there, that's all right.

"Is this the coler it's going to be when it's finished? . . . Oh, yes; only—well to be perfectly frank, I'd never paint a kitchen this light . . . No, it shows the dirt.

"Say, you know if you'd been smart you'd have had the pantry painted first . . . Yes, it would have been easier. And another thing, I'd change that wainscoting right now from green to delphinium blue . . . Yes, everybody's having the delphinium blue . . . Say, do you think that painter's making that second coat thick enough? What? . . . Oh, no, I really have not got time to go in the other room. I didn't really come to visit. I'll just sit down here and be home folks."

III

"Were you asleep? . . . Oh, I'm sorry I awakened you. I simply can't sleep in the daytime. I suppose I've got too much energy—Junior, stay away from that piano! Now we aren't going to stay but a minute—No, Junior, sh! Be still! No, he just wants a drink . . . Oh, it's too bad to put you to all that trouble—Why Buddy! You WOULD come too! . . . No! No! let Jip in! . . . There, see what you've done! Down Jip! Down! Go over there and lie down!

"Well what do you think about the war?—Buddy, will you PLEASE be still . . . No! I said NO! . . . No he doesn't need anything to eat . . . Well Elmer says it's just a lot of propoganda—Buddy! Don't put your sticky hands on the piano! No! No! Don't give Jip a cookie—Now see, it's all on the carpet!

"What? . . . Oh I know they'd love to see some picture books—Buddy! Don't let the Kitty in! Jip! Jip! Here! Here! Down! Stop It! Scat! Scat! . . . Oh, I'm afraid they've ruined your nice cushion!"

IV

"Now I bet I've just come in at your dinner time, but Walter's not home yet—well Mr. Guppey, if you're not reading another book! Honestly, every time I come over here you've got your nose stuck in a book. Now Walter's no reader at all.

"Oh just go right on with your book, Mr. Guppey, don't mind me . . . And say go right ahead getting your dinner on the table . . . Um-m! I smell something good! Is it pork chops? . . . You know what everybody ought to eat is liver.

"You know Mr. Guppey, I wish Walter would read more. I'm going to borrow some of your books and see if I can't get him started . . . What? No, thanks, I've got dinner waiting at home. What I really came for was to ask of you were doing anything tonight—I thought maybe if you weren't, Walter and I would come over."

Improve Your Social Poise

STAN thought he'd picked a winner in Tess. But when he murmured "You look wonderful tonight"—she tittered!

Obviously Tess hasn't been around much. But being new at the social game is no excuse for a girl not to know the rules—and the etiquette for compliments is simple.

Just smile charmingly, say "How nice of you to say so." The most experienced man of the world won't guess you're still ga-ga about it all. But he will if you gasp, "Aw, you're stringing me!"

Another giveaway is a panicky entrance at a formal dance. You just don't know what to do about that receiving line of sponsors? Smile graciously, introduce yourself, "I'm Dorothy Brown."

And how are you on a theater date? If you're to sit in the dress-up section, you'll have only a wrap and purse to bother about—and you can check your wrap, if you wish.

But if you've an informal theater or movie date, wear a hat and coat you can easily hold. And while your beau buys tickets, don't stick at his side—stand a few yards away.

Do you wonder what to do at your first dinner party? Watch your hostess; seat yourself when she does, rise when she rises. And you're not expected to industriously push your chair back in place when you leave the table.

As for formal dances, house parties, football games, smart restaurants—you can be creamy-smooth at them all with tips from our 40-page booklet, ETIQUETTE FOR THE TEENS. Just brush up ahead of time and everyone will say "There's a girl with poise. I must meet her!"

Send 15c for our booklet, ETIQUETTE FOR THE TEENS, to The Washington Post Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

Chest League Plans Uniforms To Spur Drive

Believed Effective Copied From Boston Members Buy Them

Mrs. Dwight F. Davis, chairman of the Community Chest League, who, with Mrs. James Clement Dunn, vice chairman, has enlisted a group of influential women to work on various committees during the precampaign days of the annual Chest campaign, is putting her motor corps committee into uniforms.

Copied from the motor corps service of the Boston Community Chest, the uniform consists of a white rubberized coat with a red collar and a white rubberized trench-like hat with a red feather. This will be the "official dress" of this unit which is to be a permanent one, on call every year. The uniforms are paid for by each member of the committee of which Mrs. Charles Carroll Glover, jr., is chairman and Mrs. Montgomery Blair, jr., vice chairman.

According to Mrs. Glover, it was felt that a uniformed group would be more effective in selling the Chest to prospective contributors. Members of the motor corps will give their services to all those wishing to make personal visits to the various Chest agencies, in order that they may see first hand work these agencies are doing, and the way in which the funds are being administered.

First Lady Plunges Into Full Schedule

Speaks Before National Press Club Today
Will Be Only Woman There, But Doesn't Mind
Situation Leaves Unchanged Views on Peace

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

MRS. ROOSEVELT'S at it again. Swinging back into a program that for one day would equal the average woman's schedule for for a week, she held her first press conference of the season yesterday morning . . . received the young Indian actor, Sabu, at noon, and later attended as honor guest the tea of the Women's Democratic Council at the Washington Club.

Today, the leading item on her calendar is her speech before the Men's National Press Club. She will be the only woman there—it being the quaint custom of gentlemen of the press to exclude feminine members of their craft from their club luncheons. Not even Mrs. Malvina Scheider, the First Lady's private secretary and constant companion, has been invited to the event. But Mrs. Roosevelt isn't worrying about being the only lady present; she has been "in purely male gatherings before."

HOPE R. MILLER.

The press conference yesterday turned on a variety of topics but lingered longest on peace. While Mrs. Roosevelt declined to comment in detail on the European situation she expressed the hope that "conversations will continue" and that there "might never be a war for any reason."

In this connection she enlarged on "an active campaign for democracy" as suggested in one of her recent columns. Pointing out that the emphasis should be on positive attitudes rather than on fear of "isms," she said that all things tending to stir up fear comprise war propaganda, whether intentionally so or not.

The current situation in Europe has not caused her to change her lecture on peace, she said, "because the same fundamental things apply to peace as always-have. Turning back once more to the campaign for democracy, she stressed that the latter cannot function properly unless every citizen knows what it means to have and preserve such a government. Every person, she went on, must show a willingness to put his shoulder to the wheel to make things work, and work well.

* * * *

WOMEN'S CLUBS, she believes, should have as their prime purpose teaching alone lines that will help the individual to shoulder responsibility of meeting local and national situations.

As to what else women can do to preserve peace, the First Lady does not know, and she believes there is no formula. Told the women screamed louder than the men in acclaiming Hitler's recent radio address, she replied that in case of war women generally reveal more bitterness. Qualifying is, they do after war, anyway. For example, if there's any bitterness left in the South today, it's on the part of the women."

To less weighty subjects the conference then turned, and in discussing her October lecture tour, the First Lady explained why she never gives out advance copies of her speech. She prefers to use notes rather than a complete manuscript; otherwise, in speaking on the same subject over and over again, she is apt to become bored. In speaking from notes, she changes her lecture each time and it is a bit fresher, she said.

Mrs. Roosevelt's Calendar

Tomorrow—Leaves at midnight for Springfield, Mass.

And this year, the newspaper women will furnish the stunt program

Mann and Miss Betty Beale are among those who will entertain for her. Sells Farm For $12,500 Through 6-line Ad in The Post

It doesn't cost much to sell a farm when you reach the right prospects. The Maryland Realty Co., Washington, D. C., ran a six-line advertisement in the classified columns of The Post for two days. The ad cost only $1.56—and brought a customer who bought a 680-acre farm for $12,500. Selling farms is a nice business if you can get the customers. The Maryland Realty Co. finds it easy when they use Post Want Ads.

Montgomery Chiefs Hear Fiscal Report

Assessments Totaled
Cream Order Hit
Democrats Pick Shaw

The Montgomery Board of County Commissioners at their weekly meeting in Rockville yesterday received a financial statement by County Accountant C. Vaughn Darby.

The statement discloses that the county, with an estimated population of 65,000, has a total assessed valuation of $132,580,883, covering both real and personal property. Real estate is assessed at $96,244,695, which is an increase of more than $6,000,000 this year over 1937.

The county at the present time, says the statement, has a bonded debt of $10,359,600, including $2,451,000 for schools, and also is a guarantor on $7,756,200 bonds of the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission, and $584,000 bonds issued by the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

The county levy for the past fiscal year, based on a tax rate of $1.50 per $100 assessed valuation, was designed to raise $1,497,307.96 on real and personal property. Of this, only $28,334.69 remained uncollected at the close of the fiscal year June 30.

Cream Order Hit

A charge that a thriving Montgomery County business is threatened by an arbitrary order of local milk producers prohibiting the sale of raw cream more than 18 hours old was made before the county commissioners yesterday by a group of women representing two farm women's co-operative markets in the county.

Mrs. Julian B. Waters, Germantown, spokesman for the group, declared that the two markets do a gross business in Montgomery County running from $130,000 to $150,000 annually, about one-fifth of which, she said, is represented by the sale of cream.

To help in the preparation of the annual treasurer's report, the board appointed Clyde Harris as a temporary clerk in the office of the county accountant.

The Woman's Club of Chevy Chase was granted exemption from taxes on its new clubhouse on Connecticut avenue. A similar grant was made to the Girl Scouts for a clubhouse and 40 acres of land.

The board of supervisors of elections announced yesterday that registration officers would sit in 35 precincts throughout the county on Tuesday, October 11, from 9 a. m. to 9 p. m. to register and transfer qualified voters and to receive declarations of intentions from new residents. The polling places are as follows:

Laytonsville, Modern Woodmen's Hall; Clarksburg, Gibson's Hall; Poolesville, Waverly Hall; Rockville, first precinct, St. Mary's Church Hall; second precinct, Rockville Firehouse; third precinct, Rockville Presbyterian Church; fourth precinct, Garrett Park Chapel; Colesville, first precinct, W. C. T. U. Hall; second precinct, Burtonsville Grange Hall; Darnestown, Darnestown Elementary School.

Bethesda, first precinct, Chevy Chase-Bethesda High School; second precinct, Chevy Chase Library; third precinct, Glen Echo Community Hall; fourth precinct, Bethesda Elementary School; fifth precinct, Chevy Chase Fire House; sixth precinct, Chevy Chase Elementary School; seventh precinct, residence of Mrs. A. R. Wiltshire; Olney, first precinct, Hawkins' Barage; second precinct, Brookeville Memorial Hall; Gaithersburg, first precinct, Masonic Hall; second precinct, Waters' Garage.

Potomac, Potomac Elementary School; Barnesville, Community Hall; Damascus, Jr. O. U. A. M. Hall; Wheaton, first precinct, Hickerson Hall; second precinct, Silver Spring Fire House; third precinct, Kensington Armory; fourth precinct, Takoma Park Presbyterian Church; first precinct, Silver Spring Armory; sixth precinct, Takoma Park Fire House; seventh precinct, Woodside Methodist Church; eight precinct, Ascension Church Parish Hall; ninth precinct, Takoma Park Library; tenth precinct, Marcy Motor Co., and eleventh precinct, Four Corners M. E. Church.

Democrats Pick Shaw

Lacy Shaw, Silver Spring, yesterday was elected chairman of the Democratic State central committee at an organization meeting of the newly elected members in the home of Robert Peter, jr., chairman of the United Democratic Organization of Montgomery County.

Mrs. Anna H. Roach, Friendship Heights, was named vice chairman; J. Forest Waler, Gaithersburg, secretary, and Roger Shaw, Rockville, treasurer. Other members of the committee are Miss Laura Gillil, North Chevy Chase, and A. A. Moxley, Monrovia.

At the suggestion of Peter, it was unanimously decided that all letters of indorsement be signed by the chairman of the Democratic State central committee. The committee will have charge of the campaign in the coming general election in co-operation with the charmen and other officials of the United Democratic Organization Committee.

$100 Clubs Voted

The formation of $100-a-year clubs for the benefit of St. Michael's Catholic School, Silver Spring, Md., was voted upon at the first fall meeting of the Parent-Teacher Association at the Academy of the Holy Name.

More than $500 will be raised for the school from the small groups. The association voted to hold the annual turkey dinner November 9 and 10 at the school hall.

Mrs. Louise Hughes was named chairman of the welfare committee. Mrs. Patrick B. Beavers, president, announced that the first of the monthly luncheons at the school would be held October 8. Nearly 100 parents attended the meeting.

Silver Spring Body Acts to Outlaw Walkathons

The Silver Spring Business Men's Association, which was opposed to the granting of a permit for the recent Walkathon in that town, last night unanimously adopted a resolution asking the Montgomery County commissioners for four ordinances virtually outlawing such enterprises.

The ordinances would require that operators of walkathons or other types of traveling circuses pay a license fee of $1,000 a month, to post bond for injury to surrounding property and to give 10 days' written notice to property owners within 500 feet. Also that local associations sponsor the enterprises and file a copy of the contract with the commissioners.

8 Ways Listed To Help Prince Georges Health

Bigger Staff Urged
Aid to Mothers Asked
Home Builders Scored

Dr. Allen Freeman, professor of public health administration at Johns Hopkins University, last night offered an eight-point program for improvement of health conditions in Prince Georges County.

Addressing more than 100 at a dinner meeting of the County Service League at the Lord Calvert Inn, College Park, Dr. Freeman revealed results of a survey he conducted at the request of the board of commissioners. He urged adoption of the following recommendations:

That the health department establish a main office at Hyattsville or some other centrally located spot and maintain its present Upper Marlboro headquarters as a branch.

That the staff of the county health department be augmented by an assistant health officer, four new nurses immediately and eventually 10, two sanitary inspectors and more clerical help.

That a tuberculosis clinician be employed and X-ray equipment purchased with a view toward establishing a permanent county tuberculosis clinic and also that the syphilis program be enlarged.

That plans be drawn for establishing a county-wide system of infant welfare stations on co-operation with county physicians.

That co-operation of the county medical profession be solicited in extending facilities for taking care of expectant mothers unable to afford such service.

That sanitary ordinances requiring connection with water mains and sewer lines where these are available be passed by each municipal corporation in the county.

That the county forbid development of new residential areas unless water supply and sewerage facilities are available.

That the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission and the Health Department co-operate in solving the sanitary problems of both the older residential developments and those in prospect.

County Staff Ranks Ninth

Dr. Freeman's report also pointed out the need for a county milk ordinance, but since his survey the commissioners have adopted an ordinance which becomes effective Saturday.

In regard to the need for more health department personnel, Dr. Freeman pointed out the county now stands ninth among the State's 23 counties in the size of ist staff, although in population it ranks third.

Furthermore, Dr. Freeman said, the health report for 1937 showed there were 31 cases of typhoid fever in the county, the highest number of any county in the State. In the number of cases of liphtheria, 42, the county was second.

Doctors Have Opposed

Citing the "limited" activities of the county health department in the care of expectant mothers unable to pay for such service, Dr. Freeman declared:

"The poor showing made by the county must be attributed to the fact that the physicians of the county have successfully opposed the conduct by the health department of any regular and continuous system of infant welfare clinics, such as those carried on in every well-organized city and in many rural areas of the country."

With respect to home sanitation problems, Dr. Freeman scored builders who construct houses without sewerage facilities.

"The practice of the builders of these houses seems to be construct a cesspool only large enough to serve until the house is sold and has been occupied for a few weeks.

"At the end of that time the cesspools overflow, and the unfortunate buyer is left to correct the condition as best he may. The seepage from overflowing and defective cesspools is to be found along many of the main highways of the county, even those passing by attractive modern homes."

The Fearless One

The fearless will not hesitate
To prove he's master of his fate.
—Old Mother Nature.

On the edge of a cliff of the Great Mountain sat Fearless the Duck Hawk. Below him far down the valley stretched the Green Forest, the Green Meadows and the Big River. His keen eyes could see for a great distance as he watched what went on below. He was unafraid. He knows not the meaning of fear. Not even King Eagle was more independent than he. None so swift of wing as Fearless. None so bold as he. None more ready to put courage to the test.

From far away over toward the Big River came the report of a gun. It was faint, made so by the distance, but Fearless heard it and a gleam of satisfaction appeared in his eyes. Twice before that morning he had heard distant guns. He knew just what it meant. He knew that it meant that for many of the furred and feathered folk the season of dreadful fear had come as it came every year at this time.

But it brought not so much as a shadow of fear to him. He scorned those two-legged hunters with their terrible guns. They might carry terror to others, but to him they meant easier hunting for a while. He would dine well with less effort because of them. Out of experience he knew it. Where there were guns there was sure to be opportunity to dine well, to pick up a meal without the bother of a chase. There would be helpless ones, hurt by those terrible guns. He had never known it to fail. So the sound of the guns made the fearless one glad rather than sad.

"There should be Ducks in plenty now," thought he. "So far since they began coming down from the North on their way to the Sunny South they have kept themselves well hidden. Now they will be driven out to the open and even if I find none of the hurt ones the others will be easy to catch. For good eating give me a fat Duck."

Fearless spread his wings and headed straight for the Big River. He flew swiftly, for he rejoices in rushing through the air and he is built for just this. As he drew near the Big River his keen eyes looking down from high up saw a hunter with a terrible gun crouched low in the wild rice of the river's edge. Out on the water near the middle of the Big River were what at the distance would have been mere black specks to you or to me. With his wonderful eyes Fearless saw them clearly for what they were, Ducks. He pitched down to a tall dead tree from the top of which he could watch.

"Those silly Ducks are beginning to swim in toward that bed of rice. They ought to know better. Probably they are new arrivals who have come a long way and are hungry," thought Fearless. "I suppose I could get them into the air and then catch one in fair chase, but it will be easier to wait and see what happens. I have a feeling that that hunter is going to get me a dinner and save me a lot of trouble."

So Fearless continued to watch. He could well afford to wait and he knew it. So motionless he sat that he seemed a part of the tree. A Red Squirrel chattered from the very next tree. He had no suspicion that he was so near to the most relentless hunter with wings. Had he suspected it he would have been as silent and motionless as Fearless himself. But the fierce-eyed Hawk (he is really a Falcon) was not interested in Squirrels. His favorite food was swimming slowly in toward the shore out there on the Big River. It is not for nothing that he is called Duck Hawk.

"The silly things," he thought. "They should know enough to stay out there in the middle of the river where nothing and no one can reach them. That is," he added, no one but myself."

The Ducks drew close to the rice. There was the sharp crack of a gun, and the Ducks were in the air, all but one. The gun cracked again. None fell but one dropped behind the others. He was hurt. This was what the Fearless one had been waiting for. He shot out and straight over that hunter so near that the latter heard the swish of wings. An instant later Fearless had struck that lagging Duck from behind before the astonished eyes of the hunter and with his prize was safely beyond range of that terrible gun.

Md. Democrats Meet Today to Complete Slate

O'Conor Assured Place Jackson Admits Loss Only One in Doubt

By Edward T. Folliard
A Staff Correspondent.

Baltimore, Sept. 27.—The delegates of Maryland's democracy will meet in a post-primary convention here at noon tomorrow to name the party's ticket and launch a campaign aimed at victory in the November election.

Thanks to the action of Prince Georges County delegates, the prospect of a battle over the gubernatorial nomination has disappeared.

Herbert R. O'Conor, 42-year-old attorney general, is scheduled to be nominated for Governor on the third ballot over Mayor Howard W. Jackson, of Baltimore, and thus will be pitted against Gov. Harry W. Nice, who has won the Republican nomination for a second term.

Jackson Admits Defeat

Mayor Jackson, after refusing all day to admit he was whipped, issued a formal statement tonight conceding the nomination to O'Conor.

"I understand that the Prince Georges County delegation will vote for Mr. O'Conor," Mayor Jackson said. "That will give him the Democratic gubernatorial nomination. Therefore, he is entitled to organize the convention and I shall not interfere in any way."

This brief statement ended the most exciting gubernatorial primary contest in Maryland's history.

3 Other Places Assured ... .

3 Other Places Assured

Three other places on the Democratic ticket are assured in advance, as follows:

For United States Senator—Millard E. Tydings, of Oakington.

For Comptroller—J. Millard Tawes, of Crisfield.

For Clerk of the Court of Appeals—James A. Young, of Annapolis and Cumberland.

The only nomination in doubt was that of attorney general, the leading candidates for which are William C. Walsh, of Cumberland, and John B. Gontrum, of Towson. The uninstructed votes of three Eastern Shore counties will settle this fight.

Needed 75 Votes

The Maryland primary election of September 12, which gave Senator Tydings a resounding victory over Roosevelt - backed Representative David J. Lewis, left a tantalizing question mark over the Democratic gubernatorial nomination. O'Conor got a plurality of the popular vot, but he failed to nail down a majority of the votes in the party convention. Needing 75 such votes, he could definitely claim only 72.

If the seven convention votes of Allegeny County went to O'Conor, he would win. These votes, however, were tied up in a court fight started by the Jackson forces. So confused was the situation that, for a time, it appeared that tomorrow's convention might be postponed.

Then, Monday night, the seven delegates of Prince Georges County announced that they would vote for O'Conor on the third ballot. That virtually assured O'Conor of victory, for these seven votes would give him 79 in the convention.

Jackson Aide Backs O'Conor

On the first ballot, the Prince Georges delegates will vote for the country's favorite-son candidate, State Senator Lansdale G. Sasscer. On the second ballot they will vote for William S. Gordy, of Salisbury, who was the second choice of the Prince Georges voters. Thereafter, under the rules of the convention, they will be free to go to O'Conor.

While Mayor Jackson was pondering the situation yesterday and refusing to admit defeat, the first of his important supporters leaped on the O'Conor bandwagon and called for a victory in November. This was David C. Winebrenner 3d, of Frederick, who had fought hard for Jackson in the primary campaign.

"The Democratic organization of Frederick County," said Winebrenner, "will be on the firing line as soon as the convention ends, its sleeves rolled up and ready to work every day until November 8 with the single determination of getting into the ballot boxes every Democratic vote in the county for Mr. O'Conor.

Ready to "Go to Town"

"We foresee a sweeping victory in November. We are ready to 'go to town' in this cause. And there will be no $2 tags on our cars."

The prospective nominee, O'Conor, is a former newspaperman who went into politics at 25 and, at 27, became the youngest State's attorney in the history of Baltimore. Today he looks several years younger than his 42 years. He is slim, of medium height, always well dressed and invariably courteous.

A Catholic, he was graduated from Loyola College and the University of Maryland Law School, became assistant State's attorney in 1921, people's counsel to the Public Service Commission in 1923 and State's attorney of Baltimore in the same year.

Dismisses Mandamus

He belongs to the Elks, Moose, Eagles, Knights of Columbus and other fraternal and civic organizations. He plays golf occasionally, but spends most of his spare time with his wife and four children.

Meanwhile, the Allegany County Circuit Court dismissed a petition for a mandamus sought by Mayor Jackson to restrain the election board from canvassing the ballot recount.

Dismissal of the petition was ordered by Chief Judge Sloan and Associate Judge Wagaman after they sustained a demurrer to the petition by the election board.

Firemen quickly extinguished the fire.

According to the driver, Charles Colvin, 2808 Twenty-sixth street northeast, he discovered the fire after pulling out of the alley alongside the Capitol Theater, where he had parked to unload. The goods, which included ink, law books and tomato juice, were covered by insurance. The amount of the damage could not be immediately ascertained.

Greenbelt Elects First Woman to Council in Runoff

Greenbelt, Md., Uncle Sam's model community, last night became the first Prince Georges County town to elect a woman to its governing body.

Mrs. Ruth Taylor polled 246 votes to capture a place on the Greenbelt council in a run-off election yesterday. Other successful candidates, all seeking re-election, were Henry H. Maurer, 266 votes; Mayor Louis Bessemer, 262; Allen D. Morrison, 248.

Councilman Sherrod E. East was re-elected last week with a majority vote on the first ballot. Winning candidates in the run-off election were required to have only a plurality vote. A total of 498 ballots were cast.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

Three of President Roosevelt's four sons hold commissions in the armed forces . . . Franklin, jr., and John are lieutenants in the Coast Artillery Reserve, because of their knowledge of the New England coast gained in sailing . . . They'd be transferred to field artillery in the event of a foreign war, no doubt, as Coast Artillerymen were in the last war.

Col. Lindbergh . . . lucky?

* * * *

Jimmy Roosevelt, as a lieutenant colonel in the Marines, would be in the thick of things, of course, first to land.

Last night I heard the wife of a high official say that she'd shoot her sons in the ankle if necessary to keep them out of war.

* * * *

CAPITAL QUIPS: In the Willard's stag bar: "I'd wade out in the Atlantic up to my hips if war comes; but no further." . . . At Pierre's deb rendezvous: "I think it's cute the way that lock of hair hangs over Henry Wallace's right eye." . . . At the Senate cafeteria: "Hitler shrieks like a hysterical woman to have her way."

"—spider web from Germany"

There's an imported spider web at the Bureau of Standards brought over from Germany at a cost of 50 cents. It's used for hairlines in precision instruments. German spider webs, it seems, are stronger than any other spider webs. Three feet of the original five remain, after two years; enough to last through a medium length war.

As her new book demonstrates again, Anne Lindbergh is a gifted writer; her prose is poetic. But one Washingtonian can testify that her sense of humor is fragile . . . When her engagement to Lindy was announced an old flame of her Smith College days cabled her two words to the embassy at Mexico City:

"Lucky Lindy!"

* * * *

It wasn't long until he received a four-page letter from Anne, thanking him for remembering her, but explaining in some detail that the "Lucky Lindy" stuff about Charles Augustus wasn't so; that he was really a serious-minded chap who didn't rely on luck a bit, but planned everything through to a finish; planned it that way, as we say nowadays.

"—the hors d'oeuvres season begins"

The hors d'oeuvres season is going into second in the Capital . . . The Siamese have celebrated at their legation the birthday of their ageless little king . . . Few of the guests needed any dinner after mopping up on Mr. Phya Abhibal Rajamaitri's exotic tidbits, certainly not the lady who wished she had looked Siam up on the map before coming, she "would have felt so much more at home."

* * * *

Three hours later some of the same people were eating again at the Spanish Embassy, munching fiercely to show their sympathy for the Loyalists, which is a remarkable phenomenon here.

Most musical name in Washington, thinks the b. w., is that of Ananta Chintakananda, third secretary of the Siamese.

* * * *

After the talk about Jim Farley's miraculous memory for 50,000 names and faces, it is diverting to see him wrinkle his brow as he tries to recall the name of someone he has seen every week for several years . . . Like all legends, this one is somewhat exaggerated. I'd wager there are some eminent New Dealers he doesn't know by sight or, shall we say, recognize?

POTOMAC PRATTLE: John Hamilton is a great reader, specializing in books about the dawn of the Republic . . . The b. g. and b. b. refer to their recent whooping cough as "Republican whooping cough," because it was a mild attack, contracted from the grandchildren of a G. O. P. Senator . . . It is the proud boast of Senator Herring that he will never issue a subpena in his profit-sharing probe.

Further Digging For Shakespeare Data Is Delayed

Williamsburg, Va., Sept. 27 (AP).—A local controversy has blocked, temporarily at least, research work which a young California woman believes might settle the world-wide controversy on whether "Bacon wrote Shakespeare."

Mrs. Marie Bauer discovered an ancient foundation in this colonial town a month ago, but it has been covered over again and, said Dr. L. W. Roberts, of the Bruton parish church vestry, today, her request for further excavation was "in abeyance."

Mrs. Bauer, who is interested in learning whether Sir Francis Bacon actually wrote the works ascribed to William Shakespeae, became interested in the church foundations when she found an old code book indicating the existence of a secret vault here. In the vault, she contends, there may be the evidence she needs.

U.S. Approves Slum Loan To Annapolis

Fund Is $487,000 $14,000 for Plans 5 Sites Considered Housing for Colored

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 27.—Approval by the United States Housing Authority of a $478,000 loan to Annapolis today launched the State capital on a program of slum clearance which will provide new quarters for approximately 100 colored families.

William F. Stromeyer, chairman of the Annapolis housing board, said five different sites were under consideration, but their locations would not be revealed.

"We don't want to make the preferred site known until we get the land as cheaply as possible," he explained. Today's approval by Washington officials gave the city $14,000 immediately for the preparation of plans, with additional money to be available when needed.

The entire project will cost $532,000, with the city putting up the balance of the funds. The loan will be repaid in 60 years at 3¼ per cent interest annually.

Early this year, a disagreement between the city council and the local housing board resulted in the resignation of three members and temporarily disrupted the slum clearance plans.

Through the leadership of the little congress' three parties, right, center, and left, the issues will be acted upon in a fashion similar to the methods employed by the National political parties of the United States.

Va. Tobacco Sales Open; Prices Low

Average 20-25c a lb. Low Grade Values Up Crop Quality High Warehouses Filled

By the Associated Press.

Virginia's 11 bright tobacco markets started the season today with a volume of offerings which glutted warehouses and with spirited bidding for common and medium grades.

The big "breaks"—attributed in part to the fact that the growing season was a month early this year—jammed 50 warehouses with acres of the golden leaf, and blocked clearing of the day's sales.

First reports showed an average price of from $20 to $25 per hundredweight, near the $22.20 average for all sales of last year, but generally lower than the usual brisk prices of the season's start. The $20-to-$25 estimate was tentative, pending receipts of actual figures from hard-pressed warehousemen.

$23 Average Predicted

Danville, largest Virginia old belt market, and somewhat of a barometer for the area, reported that the experience of lower belts was repeated there. The higher types of leaf sold proportionally less well than did the common to medium grades, which were the center of active bidding.

Indications were that the million pounds set before buyers at Danville would go for a $23 average.

South Boston, another big market, handled an estimated 500,000 pounds. Unofficial calculations were that the price there averaged $23 to $25 a hundredweight.

The chattering chant of auctioneers began before thousands of growers and spectators, who had gathered from all of southside virginia to witness the drama of the direct sales.

Auctioneers slower

The auctioneers spoke more slowly in accordance with new rules of the Tobacco Association of the United States, which limit them to a maximum of 360 piles an hour. Some have sold 100 piles an hour above that mark in past years. The limitation gives buyers more time.

The crop's quality was reliably reported as the best of some years, rich in smoking grades. But the prices for the better leaf appeared lower than usual.

The energetic bidding for the medium grades gave some Danville observers the idea that a trade war was in progress, with the makers of 15-cent cigarettes running up prices on the buyers for 10-cent companies.

Apple 'Scale' Hits Virginia Export Trade

Heavy Losses Seen Big Shipment Halted Weather Aids Pests Fruit Quality Cut

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Sept. 27.—Many Virginia orcherdists will suffer heavy losses on their apple crops this year, Dr. W. J. Schoene, Virginia entomologist, said today, because of damage to the fruit from San Jose and Putnam scale.

One large Virginia grower, the V. P. I. specialist said, sold a large shipment of apples for export to Europe and collected his deposit before he found he could not obtain a Federal inspector's certificate, which is necessary for importation of apples into France and other foreign countries.

Restrictions because of the scale, Dr. Schoene said, have interfered seriously with export of apples to Europe. Formerly sometimes as much as 40 per cent of the Virginia crop was sold to England.

Both scales are animal organisms but differ from each other biologically. The San Jose causes a red discoloration at the end of the apple, and the Putnam, the rarer of the two, does not. Both scales can be held in check by spraying methods outlined in B. P. I. bulletins, Dr. Schoene said, but the early rains, followed by dry weather, in the 1938 season provided conditions favorable to development of the scale.

The defects do not make the apple less edible, he explained, but prevent the grower from marketing it as a first-grade product. About the only way the grower can salvage apples with scale, the entomologist asserted, is to put them in cold storage and sell them later to the trade.

I Want $200,000, G.O.P. Head Calmly Tells Md. Roads Body

Senator's Terse Request Startles Commission Demand Based on Old Pledge of Gov. Nice Garrett County Promised New Roads

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Sept. 27.—A Republican campaign promise, claimed by State Senator Clifford Friend, Garrett County G. O. P. leader, popped up today to plague the State roads commission when Friend tossed a minor bombshell into the commission meeting by asserting, calmly:

"All I want is $200,000."

Chairman J. Glenn Beall, seldom at a loss for words, gaped.

"How do you want it—in cash?" he stuttered finally.

Amazement abated, however, when Friend explained Garrett County needed $100,000 worth of new work and $100,000 of reconstruction.

"These are things which Gov. Nice promised us in his last campaign," Friend remarked. "That was four years ago and nothing has been done. Our people are naturally much disappointed."

Other financial matters of Statewide importance kept the commission busy today. Bids were asked on $5,108,000 in refunding bonds, which will be used to redeem outstanding bonds issued in 1933 and 1935. The refunding bonds will eliminate provisions, listed in the old debentures, for payment if necessary from bridge tolls.

The refunding issue will be serviced entirely from gasoline taxes and truck license fees, leaving all bridge tolls for application on bridge revenue bonds the commission hopes to issue in connection with its bridge construction program.

Bids will be opened Friday at noon on the new issue.

Dizzy Beats Pirates, 2-1; Cubs Now Half Game Back

18 THE WASHINGTON POST: WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 28, 1938 ***

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

That frenzied National League pennant race would seem to call for a bit of analyzing. It isn't quite correct to state that the Pirates lead the Cubs by a half game and let that stand as the picture. The Cubs are, in fact, only a half game behind, but the league's vital statistics have much more to tell.

POVICH.

They tell, for example, that the Cubs have lost two games more than the Pirates which, to the Pirates, is very important. Because games in the lost column at this stage of the race count more heavily against a club than games in the won column count for it. The Cubs have won one more game than the Pirates, but when the race boils down to the finish it will be the games in the lost columns which will decide it.

Two games remain between the Cubs and the Pirates. If the Pirates do no better than gain an even break in that pair, we will have this situation: If the Pirates triumph in only two of their remaining four games after the series with the Cubs, the Cubs must win lal three of their remaining games to win the pennant.

Suppose the Cubs win both of their remaining games with the Pirates, and that is painting the picture very black indeed for the Pittsburgh club: Then the Cubs, in order to assure themselves of the pennant, would also have to win their three remaining games with the Cardinals. Because, if the Pirates should sweep four games with the Reds, one more defeat would put the Cubs out of it.

If the Cubs nosed out despite their valiant finish which has seen them win 18 out of their last 21 games, it will be a painful experience for Manager Gabby Hartnett. Because then it will be known that Hartnett made a horrible mistake two weeks ago. That was when he refused to take advantage of an open date and play two postponed games with the seventh-place Brooklyn Dodgers.

The National League race can progress to the point where the Cubs, if they had played and won

GABBY AND DIZZY

Just Before Yesterday's Game

those tko games with the Dodgers, could have won the pennant. Because it may be that the Cubs need games on the win side badly to offset the Pirates' margin in the lost column. If it is by a mere half game that the Pirates do win the pennant, than it can be said that Hartnett kissed off the Cubs' chances when he passed up the two games with the Dodgers.

If Hartnett's action in passing up the two Brooklyn games does prove to be a costly blunder, it will be the second such case of mismanagement in the Cubs' ranks within two years. We need go back only to the 1936 pennant race in the National League.

You remember, perhaps, that late in the season in a game between the Cubs and the St. Louis Cardinals, there were fisticuffs. Dizzy Dean, of the Cards, was involved in a fight with Tex Carleton, of the Cubs. The umpires held Dean at fault and thumbed him out of the game. Cub Manager Charley Grimm in a strange burst of magnanimity on the part of a hard-boiled big league manager, prevailed upon the umpires to reverse their decision and permit Dean to say in the game.

He succeeded, and Dean returned to the mound. He beat the Cubs that day. With Dean out of the line-up the Cubs might have won that game. They didn't, however, and at the end of the season the Cubs and Cardinals were tied for second place. Theey split the World Series shares that went to the second and third place teams. But for Grimm's generosity each of the Cubs might have pocketed aproximately $300 more in World Series money.

The remaining schedule in the National League race is somewhat in the Cubs' favor. Following the games today and tomorrow between the two leaders, the Pirates will be faced with a four-game series against the Cincinnati Reds, while the Cubs will be playing the Cardinals in three games.

The Reds loom as much tougher opposition for the Pirates than do the Cardinals for the Cubs. Manager Bill McKechnie, at Cincinnati, will have his aces, Johnny Van Meter and Paul Derringer, to throw at the Pirates, while the Cubs will be meeting a sixth-place club when they take on the Cardinals.

In the Cubs' favor appears to be their terrific momentum. Eighteen wins in their last 21 games attests to the fortitude of Hartnett's club which, less than a month ago, was 8½ games out of the lead. And the Pirates, conversely, appear to be folding rapidly.

The Cubs' dash is reminiscent of their 1935 surge when they came from out of the depths of the league to roll up 21 straight wins and capture the pennant. The team is unquestionably "hot." It is the kind of a team that comes up with the pitching to win 2-1 games and when, the need arises, comes up with the hitting to win those 10-9 affairs.

Greenberg Hits 57th, 58th Homers; Nears Babe Ruth's Record

Two More to Go! May Break Mark Bill Cox Victim One Inside Park

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Sept. 27.—Hammering Hank Greenberg pulled to within two homers of Babe Ruth's 1927 major league record of 60 home runs today as he hit his fifty-seventh and fifty-eighth circuit blows of the season in successive times at bat in the second game of a Detroit Tigers-St. Louis Browns doubleheader here.

It was the eleventh game this season in which Greenberg has hit two homers, and bettered his own major league record for that feat.

Both circuit blows were hit off Bill Cox, St. Louis starting pitcher. The first, in the first inning, was a 440-foot drive inside the park in deep center field and Greenberg barely beat the relay throw to the home plate. The scond homr was hit to the upper center field bleachers.

Detroit has five more games remaining on its schedule in which

Yanks Beat Nats, 5-2

Gomez Gives 8 Hits Wright Gets 2 Blows Leonard Is Routed

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Sept. 27.—Washington's last vestige of hope for a first-division berth in the 1938 American League standings vanished today because (1) the Nats took a 5-to-1 beating at Yankee Stadium, and (2) the fourth-place Detroit Tigers won a double-header from the St. Louis Browns.

GOMEZ

The Tigers' triumph, coincident with the Nats' defeat, increased the margin between fourth and fifth place. Fourth place thus becomes a mathematical certainty for the Tigers. Washington, however, can do no worse than finish fifth.

The man chiefly responsible for the Nats' defeat today was their long-time nemesis, Lefty Vernon Gomez, who turned in an eight-hit job against the Washington athletes. Gomez pitched two-hit ball during the first six innings and shut the Nats out until the seventh.

Leonard Out in Sixth

The Yankees accumulated ten hits against Dutch Leonard, Monte Weaver and Harry Kelley. Leonard's knuckle ball did not prove exactly baffling to the Yanks, who amassed a 4-0 lead before he was withdrawn for a pinch hitter in the sixth.

Among the Yankees' hits were a pair of two-baggers and a single by Joe Gordon and Lou Gehrig's twenty-ninth home run of the season, clouted against Leonard.

The game was played before a moderate gathering of 2,733 fans and before the proceedings started three shiny new automobiles were wheeled out to home plate and presented to Joe Di Maggio, Red Ruffing and Bill Dickey. They were the prizes offered by a cereal firm in a popularity contest won by the three Yankees.

The Yankees didn't dally with Leonard, coming up with a run in the second inning when Rolfe beat out a bunt and took second on Leonard's wild throw to first. With

Gonzaga, Central Tie By 6 to 6

2,000 See Game Score on Passes Gonzaga Improved Shea in Line-Up

By Jack Munhall.

Central High School, in its 1938 football debut, battled Gonzaga to a 6-to-6 tie yesterday before some 2,000 students at Central Stadium. Each team scored on a 35-yard forward pass, each made 10 first downs and otherwise were evenly matched.

Coach Hardy Pearce's Blue and White eleven, favorite to lift Eastern's interhigh crown, did nothing to belie that rating, showing a big, faster than usual squad which should improve with age.

Gonzaga, which opened its season with a 12-to-6 victory over Anacostia last Thursday, was a much better team yesterday, due chiefly to the return of Eddie Shea, triple threat quarterback, and the surprisingly good performance of Ralph Patton, stringy end.

Patton Is Star

It was Patton who grabbed Bill Gardiner's lengthy toss in the closing minutes of the third quarter and ran about 13 yards to the touchdown that tied the score. And it was Patton who all afternoon stood like a stone wall and threw Central for losses on almost every play aimed at his position.

In the last quarter when Central was threatening almost continually to run all over the rapidly tiring visitors, Patton was at his best. In one series of downs he spilled Central ball-carriers for a total loss of 12 yards in two plays.

But Patton could not stop the swift, clothesline arial that Tony DiVlasi shot to Benny Steiner on the first play of the second quarter when Central took a 6-0 lead that appeared sufficient to revenge Gonzaga's 6-0 triumph of last year.

Steiner in Clear

That sudden score came immediately after Central had taken the kick-off, opening the second half, on the Gonzaga 35. The fleet Seiner outdistanced Gonzaga's secondary and was in the clear when he hauled down the bal lon the 30 and raced the remaining distance.

Gonzaga's scoring play was much the same, only a bit more spectacular. Gardiner, halfback, who was a source of discomfort to Central all afternoon, ran hard to his left, stopped as if trapped, and then wheeled to shoot a perfect throw to the long-legged Patton, who was yards behind the nearest defender.

The first quarter found both teams on the defensive most of the time. Farr and Shea were getting plenty of altitude and distance with their kicks and the lines were fighting on an even basis.

Central threatened mildly midway the period when James Porter, stocky fullback, ran back a Shea punt 30 yards from the Central 45 to the Gonzaga 25. Porter then collaborated with Gus Plakus to smash the middle of Gonzaga's line for gains which moved the ball to the 16.

Reed, Baker Stop Play

Here on fourth down Porter was stopped dead by Frank Reed and Charley Baker, on the left side of the Gonzaga line, and the visitors took over the ball on downs.

Although it did not score, Gonzaga's best sustained running attack was made in the second period. It started on the kick-off, following Central's touchdown. Ralph Simone, brother of Mike Simone, former St. John's Prep athlete, who had just entered the game, ran Sclagel's boot back 10 yards to the Gonzaga 34. Shea and Gardiner then combined to pass and run with the ball for two first downs, the second of which placed the ball on the Central 27.

Gardiner almost got away for a touchdown, sweeping wide around left end, but he was pulled down after a 13-yard run. Gardiner then passed to Lane O'Donnell. The latter dropped it, but the play was successful when the referee ruled interfernce with the receiver and set the ball on the 7. But there the Gonzaga attack sputtered and after Gardiner made 4 yards and a pass, Shea to O'Donnell, was broken up by Steiner, the Purple yielded the bal lto Central on downs.

In the fourth quarter, Central was much the fresher team and probably

Cub Star Hurt in Collision in 'Crucial' Game

Sammy Snead Wins $13,500 Westchester Golf Tournament

West Virginian Gets $5,000 First Prize Brings Year's Total Up to $17,572 Burke Is Second; Sam Clinches Vardon Cup

By the United Press.

White Plains, N. Y., Sept. 27.—Sam Snead, "golden boy" of the fairways, established a new world record for golf winnings in a year when he captured the $5,000 first prize today in the rich Westchester 108-hole championship.

When the former soda-jerker from White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., gathered up this five grand, by virtue of a 430 total for the marathon tourney, he brought his 1938 winnings to $17,572. This exceeded the previous top figure of $15,500 registered by Horton Smith in 1929.

In addition, "Swingin' Sam" clinched the Harry Vardon Memorial Trophy for the year's leading professional point score by bringing his aggregate to 444. Today's victory over the Fenway Club's course earned 65 points.

Comes From Behind

Snead came from behind to win in today's final 36 holes with one of the most magnificent performances under pressure ever staged in any tournament.

Billy Burke, Cleveland veteran who finished second with 432, forced Snead to make at least a par 70 for his afternoon round to take the $5,000. Despite this pressure and despite the handicap of a milling gallery of 5,000, the great money-player came through with a 69, to nose out Burke by two strokes.

When Snead went out on the course this morning he was four strokes behind Burke, who led the pack with 286. But Sammy made the morning tour in 71, one over par, while Burke faded to a 78. Billy, who won the U. S. Open in 1931 after a 72-hole play-off with George Von Elm, rallied splendidly in the afternoon to shoot a 68, just 10 points below his morning round.

Burke Gets $2,000

Burke received $2,000 for second place.

Paul Runyan, from the nearby White Plains Metropolic Club, the P. G. A. champ, deadlocked Byron Nelson, of Reading, Pa., for third and fourth with 434s. Each received $900. Ben Hogan, of Purchase, N. Y., wound up with 436 for fifth prize, $700.

Other top money winners were Chandler Harper, Portsmouth, Va., 437, and $600; Ralph Guldahl, open champ, Mike Turnesa, of Elmsford, N. Y., and Jimmy Hines, Lakeville,

Mates Cheer Dizzy Dean

Lazzeri Praises Him He's a Hero Now Admits Arm Hurt

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Sept. 27.—There was reverence in the manner teammates greeted Dizzy Dean in the clubhouse today after Dean had uhrled the Chicago Cubs to a 2-to-1 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates, now leaders of the National League pennant battle by but half a game.

Little bolsterousness was evident, however, as Manager Gabby Hartnett and his players congratulated ol' Diz on his seven-hit performance. But to a man, they waited their turns to shake his hand and pay tribute to what Coach Tony Lazzeri described as "the greatest exhibition of sheer nerve I've ever seen on a diamond."

"Dizzy's arm hurt him, you can bet on that," Lazzeri said. "But when you have that kind of a heart, a sore arm can't stop you."

Dean, who hadn't pitched since September 18, admitted his arm pained him throughout the game, particularly in the sixth inning.

"But I wasn't going to have that stop me from winning the greatest game of my life," he grinned.

A distinct World Series atmosphere marked the battle. The 42,238 fans were on edge. Even Ford Frick, National League president, paced around the press box, jammed with writers and hastily installed telegraph wire necessitated by the interest in the three-game series.

A few pick-ups: One of the umpires evidently was as much on edge as most of the fans . . . when the game started he reversed the usual "play ball" by bellowing, "Ball, play!"

Advance ticket sales for the remaining two games are high . . . and by the time the third game is over, Cub officials said, home attendance this year will surpass that of 1937 by some 60,000 to 75,000.

Maybe "Doc" Jorgenson, Pirate trainer, has changed to fresh clothing today, but up to yesterday he had wodn the same socks, shirts and pants for ten straight days, being fearful of "jixxing" the Bucs . . . which led Coach Jewel Ens to remark: "H is a man who walks alone—and it isn't hard to understand why."

New Haven, Conn., Sept. 27 (AP).—The title bout here between Light Heavyweight Champion John Henry Lewis and Al Gainer, New Haven Negro, supposedly all set to be held October 14 was postponed for another week today at the insistence of Lewis.

The champion said he would need until October 21 to pare himself down from 184 pounds to the 175-pound limit.

Gainer said he had no objections to the October switch.

Bill Lee Fans Todd to End Buc Threat

Tying Run on Third Dean Holds Pirates Goes Out in Ninth Galan Is Hurt

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Sept. 27.—Ol' Dizzy Dean pitched his great heart out and the Chicago Cubs smack into the thick of the National League pennant battle today.

With little else on the ball but its cover, Dean hurled the Cubs to a thrill-packed, 2-to-1 victory over the league-leading Pirates for a triumph which left the Cubs trailing the Bucs by only ya half a game, with two more games between the clubs scheduled for tomorrow and Thursday.

Diz wasn't in there at the finish. Big Bill Lee, taking the mound with two out in the ninth, retired the final Pittsburgh batsman as Diz trudged slowly to the showers. But it was Dean's victory all the way, a victory he called "the greatest of my life" and one which won him the acclaim of the 42,238 hysterical fans who jammed Wrigley Field.

Dean, in recapturing for an afternoon the glory that once was his in his St. Louis Cardinal heyday, allowed the Pirate sluggers just seven hits, their only run coming with Diz in the clubhouse. In the ninth inning, Woody Jensen scored on Lee's wild pitch, with the game ending seconds later as Lee fanned Bill Todd for the final out.

Experience Tells

Starting his first game since August 20 and called on to test his ailing, sore arm in a duel all-important to the Cubs' flag hopes, Dean proved his courage. He showed little "stuff," but his change of pace, mixed with the cunning of years of experience, gave the Pirates few openings.

He allowed two hits in the first inning and one in the second, then blanked the Bucs until the sixth, when they picked up another safety. They nicked him for two hits in the eighth and another in the ninth before Lee took over.

The Cubs scored in the third on Rip Collins' triple to right and Bill Jurges' single. The other run came in the sixth. With one out, Frank Demaree bounced a single off Pitcher Ji mTobin's bare hand and went to third as Phil Cavarretta singled. Demaree then scored as Carl Reynolds forced Cavarretta at second.

Pirates Threaten

The Pirates threatened in the eighth, which Bill Todd opened with a single. Manush, batting for Tobin, filed out, but Lloyd Waner singled Todd to third. Paul Waner then hit to Dean, who tossed to Hartnett to get Todd. John Rizzo then filed to end the frame.

In the ninth, Arky Vaughan was hit by a pitched ball. After Suhr had popped out, Jensen pinch-hit for Young and forced Vaughan at second. Dean to Jurges. Handley doubled Jensen to third and Lee replaced Dean. A wild pitch sent Jensen home and, with the tying ru non third, Lee fanned Todd to end the battle.

The victory, Dean's seventh as against one loss this year, cost the Cubs the services of Outfielder Augie Calan, possibly for the remainder of their five-game schedule. Sliding into second in the second inning, Galan twisted his left knee so badly he had to be carried from the field.

Bryant Goes Today

Cavarretta went to rightfield, with Demaree moving to left, and this arrangement probably will be carried out again tomorrow, when Clay Bryant will try to make it two in a row for the Bruins. The Pirates' slab choice was Bob Klinger.

Tobin gave Dean a pitching argument all the way today, allowing only eight hits. Bill Swift, who took over for the Bucs in the eighth, retired the side in order.

Cleveland Loss To Redskins Hit By Rams' Owner

Cleveland, Sept. 27 (AP).—Thomas E. Lipscomb, president of the Cleveland Rams of the National Pro Football League, said tonight he was dissatisfied with the club's showing against the Washington Redskins Sunday and would confer with Coach Hugo Bezdek and Assistant Coach Art Lewis.

Lipscomb said no player was certain of his job except the backs and ends. The Rams lost to Washington, 27-13, for their third straight league defeat this year and won only one game last season.

Sammy Baugh Picks Redskins to Repeat This Season

By "Slingin' Sammy" Baugh.
(Forward Passing Champion, National Football League.)

Thus far I've refrained from going out on the limb about the National Football League championship, but today I'm ready to make a prediction.

I think the winner of the league title will be the Washington Redskins.

This may not sound very modest on my part inasmuch as I am a member of the Redskins, but inasmuch as it's an old custom to predict winners I'm making my choice.

SAMMY BAUGH.

I hesitated to make my forecast at the start of the season as we had only a vague idea, at best, of the league set-up at that time. But now with three weeks of the season having passed, we are in a fair position to tell how the clubs are stacking up.

When I pick the Redskins to win the 1938 championship, I'm predicting, of course, that they will repeat. That means they would be the firt team since 1933 to win the league title two years in a row. But I believe they can do it.

When I pick the Redskins, I'm stringing along with a pretty good team, don't forget. Football experts, particularly, in the East, went on record last year that the Redskin team which beat the New York Giants, 49-14, for the Eastern Division championship at Yankee Stadium, was the most powerful football team ever assembled.

Then, of course, we followed that game by beating the Chicago Bears in the play-off, 28-21. How many teams have scored 28 points against the Bears in recent years. I'll answer that one for you—none.

At the start of the season, I couldn't conscientiously pick the Redskins to repeat because I didn't know to just what extent we would miss Cliff Battles. He was the greatest running back in football last season, in my opinion, and no team can lose him and not be hurt badly. Without Battles, we didn't figure to be as strong.

But we've been lucky. The Redskins have picked up in young Andy Farkas a back who can do almost as many things as Battles almost as well. I believe he'll be the outstanding rookie back of the season by the end of the campaign and one of the league's leading ground gainers.

And the Redskins have been fortunate, too, in coming up with a capable fellow in Bill Hartman, of Georgia. It is a case of the Redskins having the luck to come up with two sensational young backs in the same season, which doesn't occur very often in pro football.

There doesn't seem to be any slackening, either, in that Redskin line. It was our line that paved the way to our championship last year and this season veterans like Turk Edwards and Les Olsson don't seem to have slowed at all. And we have better replacements than last year. In Roy Young, the Texas A. and M. lad who can play either guard, tackle or end, the Redskins have made a powerful addition.

In our first three games we have two wins and a tie to show, and that is plenty encouraging to the Redskins, inasmuch as Riley Smith and myself, two regular backs, have not been in uniform since the first game on account of injuries. When Riley and I return to action I think we'll lend something more to the Redskins' attack.

The team we'll have to beat in the East is the New York Giants, I believe. I say that despite the Giants' defeat by the Philadelphia Eagles last Sunday. The Giants are always tougher as the season progresses.

The Eagles are a new power in the Eastern Division. They played us to a 26-to-23 game a few weeks ago, and it wasn't exactly surprising when they bumped off the Giants, 14 to 10. In Dick Riffle and Dave Smulker they have a pair of outstanding backs and in Joe Carter and Hewitt they have as fine a pair of ends as there is in the league.

In the West, it's fairly safe to predict that either the Chicago Bears or the Detroit Lions will be the division winners. The Chicago Cardinals, the Green Bay Packers and the Cleveland Club don't appear to measure up, in my opinion.

If, as I hope, the Redskins win the Eastern Division championship, I won't have many fears about our chances in the play-off against the West. The Redskins have a habit of gearing themselves up to their best effort when it is demanded. I think we're a pretty good football team—good enough to repeat.

Steve Mamakos Defeats Bobby Pacho at Stadium

Down In Front

By Richards Vidmer

New York, Sept. 27.—It may come as something of a shock, but just a week from today the Yankees will be playing the first game of the World's Series. Just whom they will be playing is a matter of increasing speculation, however.

VIDMER.

But whether it is to be the Cubs or the Pirates shouldn't, and probably doesn't, worry the Yankess in the slightest, unless it is from a purely economical point of view. Naturally, they would prefer to play the Cubs, not because they figure Gabby Hartnett's hurricanes the softer touch in the series, but because Wrigley field in Chicago can accomodate more customers than the Pittsburgh pavillion for the first two games. The Yankees don't figure on returning to either city for a sixth contest.

And there is precedent fo this sot of figuring. Only once before have the Yankees' faced the Pirates in a world's series, and only once before have they faced the Cubs. Neither series required a fifth game, much less a sixth. The Yankees of '32 conquered the Cubs in the same short, decisive manner. But each series, brief as it was, brings back a lot of memories.

There is, first of all, the memory of the Yankee lnieup. It included Coombs, Koenig, Ruth, Gehrig, Meusel, Lazzeri and Dugan in that order, for every afternoon, almost without variation, the play-by-play experts would dictate the same phrases to their operators — "Coombs singled to left . . . Koenig walked . . . Ruth hit a home run into the rightfield bleachers . . . Gehrig hit a home run into the centerfield bleachers . . ."

There is the memory of the Yankees taking their batting practice before the first game of the series. It may seem strange that this should stand out, and yet it was significant. None of the Pirates ever had seen Ruth, Gehrig, Meusel, Laeri and the others whose mighty clouts were chronicled in the press almost daily. And they gathered to watch batting practice, wondering, and perhaps doubting, if these men really hit like that or if it was a figment of fiction.

I can't remember who was pitching in batting practice, but he had wonderful control, for he hit each Yankee bat in turn and one after the other the ball maulers stepped to the plate and parked pitch after pitch in the distant stands.

The Pirates departed in a collective daze. And they knew they were beaten before the series started.

There was an almost perfect game pitched by Herb Pennock in the Yankee Stadium. The long, lean lefthander turned back the pirates for seven and one-third innings without the semblance of a hit, throwing his slow curve with magic precision.

And there was the anticlimax that ended the series. With the score tied, 3 to 3, in the last half of the last inning, the Yankees filled the bases and for practically the first time there was a measure of excitement. Then, without warning, John Miljust, the Pirate pitcher, let loose a wild pitch and the winning run romped home.

There are many unimportant memories connected with the only series ever played between the Yankees and the Cubs, but standing out above all the others and forcing them into the background is the glamorous picture of Babe Ruth standing at the plate in Chicago—one against the mob.

The Cubs that year had started off under the management of Rogers Hornsby. He had been released after the fight was more than half over and Chicago had gone on to win the pennant under Charlie Grimm, aided tremendously down the stretch by the timely and consistent hitting of Mark Koenig, who had been called from the Coast League in an emergency. But when they voted how the spoils should be split before the series started they gave Koenig only a part share and Hornsby none at all.

This irked the great humanitarian George Herman Ruth and he expressed his opinion of the Cubs' questionable generosity in no uncertain terms—and for publication. The Chicago fans, however, were of the conviction that their champions could do no wrong, and so when the Yankees arrived at Wrigley Field for the third game of the series, having won the first two in New York, the Babe became a target for abuse, vegetables, fruit and assorted boos, hisses and jeers.

But the Babe simply smiled as he stepped to the plate, arrogantly pointed to the centerfield fence and while the shouts of derision still filled the air, majectically drove the ball over the spot indicated and trotted around the bases.

The Pirates will not have to watch Combs, Koenig, Ruth, Meusel, Lazzeri and Dugan knocking balls into the stands in batting practice, nor will the Cubs have the heroic Babe to contend with should they meet the Yankees again. But there are others just as destructive, just as heroic, and the Yankees wait only to see which team they will have to beat. As far as they are concerned it is a very dull week.

Joe Perry Wins Over Huerta

Lembi Beats Calp
De Polio Beats Jordan
Saugsted Beats Raspi
Scores a T. K. O.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Steve Mamakos, the Southwest strong boy, elbowed his way through a chap by the name of Bobby Pacho last night at Griffith Stadium to an easy ten-round decision.

It was no contest after the second round, and never enough of a fight to arouse the customers from their lethargy. And speaking of customers, they must have known something because they remained away in large numbers. Some 1,500 turned out for the farce.

Pacho, rated ninth by the National Boxing Association, was the poorest excuse for a boxer yet exhibited here. He sported a roll of fat around his waistline as big as a life-preserver, and didn't appear anxious to fight.

He spent most of the evening lolling on the ropes rolling with Mamakos' punches, or leaning heavily on the energetic but impotent Greek lad. He didn't exert himself at any time during the fight, and threw punches like a miser tossing away gold pieces.

Mamakos Tries

Mamakos tried hard but looked foolish, nevertheless. Most of his punches curled harmlessly around Pacho's neck, were blocked by an elbow or glove, or missed completely.

The few times Steve stabbed Pacho in the tummy the Mexican bellowed like a stuck elephant. His breathing was labored after the seventh and it was problematical whether he would be able to stand up long enough for the referee to award Mamakos the decision.

Mamakos, of course, showed no pain. His right eye had a shoe-polish glow coming out for the ninth, and there was a puffiness on the right cheek-bone. Blood drolled from his unprotected mouth. Pacho, as weary as he was, made a strong comeback in the ninth, but it didn't even win the round.

Lembo Beats Calp

Frankie Lembo, 129¼, of San Francisco, won a unanimous decision over Calvin Calp, 132, of Baltimore, in a gory six-round semi-final. It was all Lembo after the third when Calp seemed to lose his steam, and it was in this round that both suffered nasty cuts from butting in a corner.

Lembo's battle-scarred eye was split wide open, and Calp's scalp was ripped open during the melee as both boys stood toe-to-toe and slugged it out. Lembo was guilty of hitting low in the fourth and fifth, but carried two rounds by a wide margin.

Perry Beats Huerta

Irish Joe Perry, 131¼, scored a unanimous decision over Pancho Huerta, 129, in another six. Huerta waged a surprisingly good and hard fight, keeping on Perry in the earlier rounds and rending his sharp left jab null and void.

Vince de Polio, 161¼, of Baltimore, made a successful pro-debut, shaking up Tom Jordon considerably while out-pointing him in a four-rounder. It also was Jordon's first pro appearance. He weighed 163½ pounds.

Eddie Saugsted scored a technical knockout over the aged Joe Raspi, of Baltimore, in the second of a scheduled six-rounder.

Navy Drills On Defense

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Sept. 27.—Coach Hank Hardwick drove the Navy varsity eleven through a brisk and bruising scrimmage with the plebes this afternoon in an effort to tighten up the defensive work, which was not altogether satisfactory in last week's opener with William and Mary.

For more than an hour the plebes carried the ball, using formations Virginia Military Institute, Saturday's opponent, employed against Virginia last week and probably will use against Navy. They tried passes, line bucks, spinners and reverses—everything the Middies will have to watch, and were not very successful.

Hardwick was pleased with the squad's progress, but not satisfied. His critical nautical eye detected faults not visible to the layman, and minced no words pointing them out to the offending players. Virtually the remainder of the week will be devoted to defensive work, although th offense will not be entirely neglected.

Lou Mayo, understudy to Emmett Wood, who was injured Saturday, was back in uniform today and will be ready to face the Cadets. Without him to stand behind Wood and give him a rest every now and then the Middies would be in a tight spot. Harold Harwood, first reserve center; Clarence Corbett, end, and Harold Felix, another center, all of whom were injured, will be ready by Saturday.

Nugent declined to deny or confirm reports that J. T. Prothro, of Memphis, Tenn., would be the club's next manager.

Johnnies Card Set

Open With American Game October 22
Play at Annapolis

Annapolis Md., Sept. 27.—St. John's College, whose football has extended well over a half century, is almost starting the game anew, owing to shrinkage of its squad of veterans to almost the vanishing point.

Games with Maryland, William and Mary and Gettysburg, for which the Johnnis could have only been push-overs, have been canceled and the first match will be with American University at Annapolis, on October 22.

In the meantime, Coaches Val Lentz and John Donohoe are working with a squad of 50, which includes backs at 135 puonds and tackles at 150.

A series of "six-man games" are being played to determine what can be called the varsity men and, the coaches say, everybody is getting a lot of fun out of it and there will be some sort of a team ready to play the five games which make up the schedule this year.

Just half of the squad is from the new freshman class, and few of them look up to the standard of college football. One lineman, Stew Archie, 195-pound tackle, and by far the giant of the squad, and two backs, Fred Buck and Skippy McMillan, are the only regulars of last year now on the squad.

Lenzz and Donohoe have picked 19, however, as the present varsity squad and the contracted games now going on may produce some others.

Fred Perry Opens Pro Tennis Play

Chicago, Sept. 27 (AP).—Fred Perry, the Englishman who ruled British and American amateur tennis for three years, will make his first bid for national professional honors tomorrow in the 1938 singles and doubles tournament opening at the Chicago Arena.

Perry's first foe will be William Croker, Onwentsia Club professional of Lake Forest, Ill. Bruce Barnes, Berkeley Bell, Walter Senior, George Lott, jr., Richard Skeen and Vincent Richard were rated Perry's chief Threats.

He will team with Richards in doubles play.

Mrs. Hussey Wins President's Plate Tourney

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Mrs. George Hussey, tournament committee member of the Women's District Golf Association, from Army and Navy, won the President's Plate event yesterday at Congressional over a field of officers and past presidents of the association.

Mrs. Hussey and a clubmate, Mrs. T. J. Johnson, actually tied with low nets of 82, the former scoring 88-6—82, and Mrs. Johnson, 89-7—82, but rather than play off for the main triphy Mrs. Johnson conceded the low net and took the low gross prize, as Mrs. Hussey was eligible for only one trophy.

Mrs. J. C. Dale, KeKnwood, won second low net with 51, 44—93-11—84, while Mrs. H. L. Simcoe won third in a draw with Mrs. C. E. McGowan, of Beaver Dam. Mrs Simcoe scored 103-18—85, and Mrs. McGowan, 108-23—85.

Mrs. R. C. Miller, vice president of the body, from Kenwood, won the high net award with 101, while Best Sport prizes went to Mrs. Frank Kramer, Manor, and Mrs. E. Midmayer, Argyle.

Mrs. Hussey was out in 46, with threes on the third and ninth holes, and back in 42, finishing one under par figures on the seventeenth and eighteenth holes, with a three and four.

Mrs. Johnson apparently was out of the running for the prizes, as she required 50 strokes on the first nine, but she cracked 40 coming back with a fine 39, finishing with a birdie three on the finishing hole for her score that tied Mrs. Hussey.

The members of the host Congressional Club were hosts at a cocktail party for the entrants, following the play. Mrs. R. W. Payne presented the prizes.

Capital Is Host To Congressional

Capital's strengthened golf team will play host to Congressional's defending champions in the feature enconter in the second round of the Maryland State Golf Association team matches Sunday, as play enters the quarter-final round.

In the other upper-bracket pairin Baltimore C. C. visits Rodgers Forge, conquerors of Kenwood, in an all-Baltimore match. Green Spring Valley, upset victors over a weakened Chevy Chase team, meets Beaver Dam, who settled its tie differences with Manor by the flip of a coin, while Indian Spring's cofavored line-up meets its first severe test in Hillendale, the 1937 finalists, over the Towson layout.

Bolstered by Johnny Burke, Intercollegiate, District and Rhode Island Open and Amateur titleholder, the Capital team is regarded as a possible victor over the well-balanced Congressional line-up captained by Parker Nolan and led by Wiffy Cox.

The Sylvester-coached lads trounced Suburban, 13-5, last week and over their home course, and with Sylvester, Burke, Charlie Pettijohn, Billy Houghton, George Molloy, Bob Brown, Henry Cohen, Bill Pendergast in the line-up, they may cause the champions the most trouble since Manor bowed, 11-7, in a semifinal test last year.

Three Deadlock for Wright Golf Trophy

R. S. Bean, A. W. Furness and W. C. Schroeder finished in a deadlock for the Wright trophy in the Bureau of Mines tournament yesterday at Indian Spring. Bean scored 111-39, 72; Furniss 97-25, 72, and Schroeder 84-12, 72.

L. Plein had low net for the day's play but was not eligible for the trophy. Plein scored 102-36, 66.

G. R. Hopkins won low gross with an 81, and Scroeder was second with 84.

Dizzy Beats Pirates, 2-1; Cubs Now Half Game Back

18 THE WASHINGTON POST: WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 28, 1938 ***

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

That frenzied National League pennant race would seem to call for a bit of analyzing. It isn't quite correct to state that the Pirates lead the Cubs by a half game and let that stand as the picture. The Cubs are, in fact, only a half game behind, but the league's vital statistics have much more to tell.

POVICH.

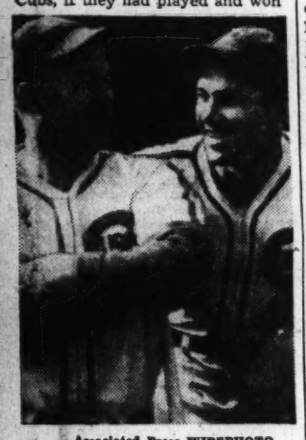
They tell, for example, that the Cubs have lost two games more than the Pirates which, to the Pirates, is very important. Because games in the lost column at this stage of the race count more heavily against a club than games in the won column count for it. The Cubs have won one more game than the Pirates, but when the race boils down to the finish it will be the games in the lost columns which will decide it.

Two games remain between the Cubs and the Pirates. If the Pirates do no better than gain an even break in that pair, we will have this situation: If the Pirates triumph in only two of their remaining four games, after the series with the Cubs, the Cubs must win lal three of their remaining games to win the pennant.

Suppose the Cubs win both of their remaining games with the Pirates, and that is painting the picture very black indeed for the Pittsburgh club: Then the Cubs, in order to assure themselves of the pennant, would also have to win their three remaining games with the Cardinals. Because, if the Pirates should sweep four games with the Reds, one more defeat would put the Cubs out of it.

If the Cubs nosed out despite their valiant finish which has seen them win 18 out of their last 21 games, it will be a painful experience for Manager Gabby Hartnett. Because then it will be known that Hartnett made a horrible mistake two weeks ago. That was when he refused to take advantage of an open date and play two postponed games with the seventh-place Brooklyn Dodgers.

The National League race can progress to the point where the Cubs, if they had played and won



Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Just Before Yesterday's Game

those tko games with the Dodgers, could have won the pennant. Because it may be that the Cubs need games on the win side badly to offset the Pirates' margin in the lost column. If it is by a mere half game that the Pirates do win the pennant, than it can be said that Hartnett kissed off the Cubs' chances when he passed up the two games with the Dodgers.

If Hartnett's action in passing up the two Brooklyn games does prove to be a costly blunder, it will be the second such case of mismanagement in the Cubs' ranks within two years. We need go back only to the 1936 pennant race in the National League.

You remember, perhaps, that late in the season in a game between the Cubs and the St. Louis Cardinals, there were fisticuffs. Dizzy Dean, of the Cards, was involved in a fight with Tex Carleton, of the Cubs. The umpires held Dean at fault and thumbed him out of the game. Cub Manager Charley Grimm in a strange burst of magnanimity on the part of a hard-boiled big league manager, prevailed upon the umpires to reverse their decision and permit Dean to say in the game.

He succeeded, and Dean returned to the mound. He beat the Cubs that day. With Dean out of the line-up the Cubs might have won that game. They didn't, however, and at the end of the season the Cubs and Cardinals were tied for second place. Theey split the World Series shares that went to the second and third place teams. But for Grimm's generosity each of the Cubs might have pocketed aproximately $300 more in World Series money.

The remaining schedule in the National League race is somewhat in the Cubs' favor. Following the games today and tomorrow between the two leaders, the Pirates will be faced with a four-game series against the Cincinnati Reds, while the Cubs will be playing the Cardinals in three games.

The Reds loom as much tougher opposition for the Pirates than do the Cardinals for the Cubs. Manager Bill McKechnie, at Cincinnati, will have his aces, Johnny Van Meter and Paul Derringer, to throw at the Pirates, while the Cubs will be meeting a sixth-place club when they take on the Cardinals.

In the Cubs' favor appears to be their terrific momentum. Eighteen wins in their last 21 games attests to the fortitude of Hartnett's club which, less than a month ago, was 8½ games out of the lead. And the Pirates, conversely, appear to be folding rapidly.

The Cubs' dash is reminiscent of their 1935 surge when they came from out of the depths of the league to roll up 21 straight wins and capture the pennant. The team is unquestionably "hot." It is the kind of a team that comes up with the pitching to win 2-1 games and when the need arises, comes up with the hitting to win those 10-9 affairs.

Greenberg Hits 57th, 58th Homers; Nears Babe Ruth's Record

Two More to Go! May Break Mark Bill Cox Victim One Inside Park

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Sept. 27.—Hammering Hank Greenberg pulled to within two homers of Babe Ruth's 1927 major league record of 60 home runs today as he hit his fifty-seventh and fifty-eighth circuit blows of the season in successive times at bat in the second game of a Detroit Tigers-St. Louis Browns doubleheader here.

It was the eleventh game this season in which Greenberg has hit two homers, and bettered his own major league record for that feat.

Both circuit blows were hit off Bill Cox, St. Louis starting pitcher. The first, in the first inning, was a 440-foot drive inside the park in deep center field and Greenberg barely beat the relay throw to the home plate. The scond homr was hit to the upper center field bleachers.

Detroit has five more games remaining on its schedule in which

Yanks Beat Nats, 5-2

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Sept. 27.—Washington's last vestige of hope for a first-division berth in the 1938 American League standings vanished today because (1) the Nats took a 5-to-1 beating at Yankee Stadium, and (2) the fourth-place Detroit Tigers won a double-header from the St. Louis Browns.

GOMEZ

The Tigers' triumph, coincident with the Nats' defeat, increased the margin between fourth and fifth place. Fourth place thus becomes a mathematical certainty for the Tigers. Washington, however, can do no worse than finish fifth.

The man chiefly responsible for the Nats' defeat today was their long-time nemesis, Lefty Vernon Gomez, who turned in an eight-hit job against the Washington athletes. Gomez pitched two-hit ball during the first six innings and shut the Nats out until the seventh.

Leonard Out in Sixth

The Yankees accumulated ten hits against Dutch Leonard, Monte Weaver and Harry Kelley. Leonard's knuckle ball did not prove exactly baffling to the Yanks, who amassed a 4-0 lead before he was withdrawn for a pinch hitter in the sixth.

Among the Yankees' hits were a pair of two-baggers and a single by Joe Gordon and Lou Gehrig's twenty-ninth home run of the season, clouted against Leonard.

The game was played before a moderate gathering of 2,733 fans and before the proceedings started three shiny new automobiles were wheeled out to home plate and presented to Joe Di Maggio, Red Ruffing and Bill Dickey. They were the prizes offered by a cereal firm in a popularity contest won by the three Yankees.

The Yankees didn't dally with Leonard, coming up with a run in the second inning when Rolfe beat out a bunt and took second on Leonard's wild throw to first. With

Gonzaga, Central Tie By 6 to 6

2,000 See Game Score on Passes Gonzaga Improved Shea in Line-Up

By Jack Munhall.

Central High School, in its 1938 football debut, battled Gonzaga to a 6-to-6 tie yesterday before some 2,000 students at Central Stadium. Each team scored on a 35-yard forward pass, each made 10 first downs and otherwise were evenly matched.

Coach Hardy Pearce's Blue and White eleven, favorite to lift Eastern's interhigh crown, did nothing to belie that rating, showing a big, faster than usual squad which should improve with age.

Gonzaga, which opened its season with a 12-to-6 victory over Anacostia last Thursday, was a much better team yesterday, due chiefly to the return of Eddie Shea, triple threat quarterback, and the surprisingly good performance of Ralph Patton, stringy end.

Patton Is Star

It was Patton who grabbed Bill Gardiner's lengthy toss in the closing minutes of the third quarter and ran about 13 yards to the touchdown that tied the score. And it was Patton who all afternoon stood like a stone wall and threw Central for losses on almost every play aimed at his position.

In the last quarter when Central was threatening almost continually to run all over the rapidly tiring visitors, Patton was at his best. In one series of downs he spilled Central ball-carriers for a total loss of 12 yards in two plays.

But Patton could not stop the swift, clothesline arial that Tony DiVlasi shot to Benny Steiner on the first play of the second quarter when Central took a 6-0 lead that appeared sufficient to revenge Gonzaga's 6-0 triumph of last year.

Steiner in Clear

That sudden score came immediately after Central had taken the kick-off, opening the second half, on the Gonzaga 35. The fleet Seiner outdistanced Gonzaga's secondary and was in the clear when he hauled down the bal lon the 30 and raced the remaining distance.

Gonzaga's scoring play was much the same, only a bit more spectacular. Gardiner, halfback, who was a source of discomfort to Central all afternoon, ran hard to his left, stopped as if trapped, and then wheeled to shoot a perfect throw to the long-legged Patton, who was yards behind the nearest defender.

The first quarter found both teams on the defensive most of the time. Farr and Shea were getting plenty of altitude and distance with their kicks and the lines were fighting on an even basis.

Central threatened mildly midway the period when James Porter, stocky fullback, ran back a Shea punt 30 yards from the Central 45 to the Gonzaga 25. Porter then collaborated with Gus Plakus to smash the middle of Gonzaga's line for gains which moved the ball to the 16.

Reed, Baker Stop Play

Here on fourth down Porter was stopped dead by Frank Reed and Charley Baker, on the left side of the Gonzaga line, and the visitors took over the ball on downs.

Although it did not score, Gonzaga's best sustained running attack was made in the second period. It started on the kick-off, following Central's touchdown. Ralph Simone, brother of Mike Simone, former St. John's Prep athlete, who had just entered the game, ran Sclagel's boot back 10 yards to the Gonzaga 34. Shea and Gardiner then combined to pass and run with the ball for two first downs, the second of which placed the ball on the Central 27.

Gardiner almost got away for a touchdown, sweeping wide around left end, but he was pulled down after a 13-yard run. Gardiner then passed to Lane O'Donnell. The latter dropped it, but the play was successful when the referee ruled interfernce with the receiver and set the ball on the 7. But there the Gonzaga attack sputtered and after Gardiner made 4 yards and a pass, Shea to O'Donnell, was broken up by Steiner, the Purple yielded the bal lto Central on downs.

In the fourth quarter, Central was much the fresher team and probably

Cub Star Hurt in Collision in 'Crucial' Game

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Sammy Snead Wins $13,500 Westchester Golf Tournament

By the United Press.

White Plains, N. Y., Sept. 27.—Sam Snead, "golden boy" of the fairways, established a new world record for golf winnings in a year when he captured the $5,000 first prize today in the rich Westchester 108-hole championship.

When the former soda-jerker from White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., gathered up this five grand, by virtue of a 430 total for the marathon tourney, he brought his 1938 winnings to $17,572. This exceeded the previous top figure of $15,500 registered by Horton Smith in 1929.

In addition, "Swingin' Sam" clinched the Harry Vardon Memorial Trophy for the year's leading professional point score by bringing his aggregate to 444. Today's victory over the Fenway Club's course earned 65 points.

Comes From Behind

Snead came from behind to win in today's final 36 holes with one of the most magnificent performances under pressure ever staged in any tournament.

Billy Burke, Cleveland veteran who finished second with 432, forced Snead to make at least a par 70 for his afternoon round to take the $5,000. Despite this pressure and despite the handicap of a milling gallery of 5,000, the great money-player came through with a 69, to nose out Burke by two strokes.

When Snead went out on the course this morning he was four strokes behind Burke, who led the pack with 286. But Sammy made the morning tour in 71, one over par, while Burke faded to a 78. Billy, who won the U. S. Open in 1931 after a 72-hole play-off with George Von Elm, rallied splendidly in the afternoon to shoot a 68, just 10 points below his morning round.

Burke Gets $2,000

Burke received $2,000 for second place.

Paul Runyan, from the nearby White Plains Metropolic Club, the P. G. A. champ, deadlocked Byron Nelson, of Reading, Pa., for third and fourth with 434s. Each received $900. Ben Hogan, of Purchase, N. Y., wound up with 436 for fifth prize, $700.

Other top money winners were Chandler Harper, Portsmouth, Va., 437, and $600; Ralph Guldahl, open champ, Mike Turnesa, of Elmsford, N. Y., and Jimmy Hines, Lakeville,

Mates Cheer Dizzy Dean

Lazzeri Praises Him He's a Hero Now Admits Arm Hurt

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Sept. 27.—There was reverence in the manner teammates greeted Dizzy Dean in the clubhouse today after Dean had uhrled the Chicago Cubs to a 2-to-1 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates, now leaders of the National League pennant battle by but half a game.

Little boisterousness was evident, however, as Manager Gabby Hartnett and his players congratulated ol' Diz on his seven-hit performance. But to a man, they waited their turns to shake his hand and pay tribute to what Coach Tony Lazzeri described as "the greatest exhibition of sheer nerve I've ever seen on a diamond."

"Dizzy's arm hurt him, you can bet on that," Lazzeri said. "But when you have that kind of a heart, a sore arm can't stop you."

Dean, who hadn't pitched since September 18, admitted his arm pained him throughout the game, particularly in the sixth inning.

"But I wasn't going to have that stop me from winning the greatest game of my life," he grinned.

A distinct World Series atmosphere marked the battle. The 42,238 fans were on edge. Even Ford Frick, National League president, paced around the press box, jammed with writers and hastily installed telegraph wire necessitated by the interest in the three-game series.

A few pick-ups: One of the umpires evidently was as much on edge as most of the fans . . . when the game started he reversed the usual "play ball" by bellowing, "Ball, play!"

Advance ticket sales for the remaining two games are high . . . and by the time the third game is over, Cub officials said, home attendance this year will surpass that of 1937 by some 60,000 to 75,000.

Maybe "Doc" Jorgenson, Pirate trainer, has changed to fresh clothing today, but up to yesterday he had wodn the same socks, shirts and pants for ten straight days, being fearful of "jixxing" the Bucs . . . which led Coach Jewel Ens to remark: "H is a man who walks alone—and it isn't hard to understand why."

New Haven, Conn., Sept. 27 (AP).—The title bout here between Light Heavyweight Champion John Henry Lewis and Al Gainer, New Haven Negro, supposedly all set to be held October 14 was postponed for another week today at the insistence of Lewis.

The champion said he would need until October 21 to pare himself down from 184 pounds to the 175-pound limit.

Gainer said he had no objections to the October switch.

Bill Lee Fans Todd to End Buc Threat

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Sept. 27.—Ol' Dizzy Dean pitched his great heart out and the Chicago Cubs smack into the thick of the National League pennant battle today.

With little else on the ball but its cover, Dean hurled the Cubs to a thrill-packed, 2-to-1 victory over the league-leading Pirates for a triumph which left the Cubs trailing the Bucs by only ya half a game, with two more games between the clubs scheduled for tomorrow and Thursday.

Diz wasn't in there at the finish. Big Bill Lee, taking the mound with two out in the ninth, retired the final Pittsburgh batsman as Diz trudged slowly to the showers. But it was Dean's victory all the way, a victory he called "the greatest of my life" and one which won him the acclaim of the 42,238 hysterical fans who jammed Wrigley Field.

Dean, in recapturing for an afternoon the glory that once was his in his St. Louis Cardinal heyday, allowed the Pirate sluggers just seven hits, their only run coming with Diz in the clubhouse. In the ninth inning, Woody Jensen scored on Lee's wild pitch, with the game ending seconds later as Lee fanned Bill Todd for the final out.

Experience Tells

Starting his first game since August 20 and called on to test his ailing, sore arm in a duel all-important to the Cubs' flag hopes, Dean proved his courage. He showed little "stuff," but his change of pace, mixed with the cunning of years of experience, gave the Pirates few openings.

He allowed two hits in the first inning and one in the second, then blanked the Bucs until the sixth, when they picked up another safety. They nicked him for two hits in the eighth and another in the ninth before Lee took over.

The Cubs scored in the third on Rip Collins' triple to right and Bill Jurges' single. The other run came in the sixth. With one out, Frank Demaree bounced a single off Pitcher Ji mTobin's bare hand and went to third as Phil Cavarretta singled. Demaree then scored as Carl Reynolds forced Cavarretta at second.

Pirates Threaten

The Pirates threatened in the eighth, which Bill Todd opened with a single. Manush, batting for Tobin, flied out, but Lloyd Waner singled Todd to third. Paul Waner then hit to Dean, who tossed to Hartnett to get Todd. John Rizzo then flied to end the frame.

In the ninth, Arky Vaughan was hit by a pitched ball. After Suhr had popped out, Jensen pinch-hit for Young and forced Vaughan at second. Dean to Jurges. Handley doubled Jensen to third and Lee replaced Dean. A wild pitch sent Jensen home and, with the tying run non third, Lee fanned Todd to end the battle.

The victory, Dean's seventh as against one loss this year, cost the Cubs the services of Outfielder Augie Galan, possibly for the remainder of their five-game schedule. Sliding into second in the second inning, Galan twisted his left knee so badly he had to be carried from the field.

Bryant Goes Today

Cavarretta went to rightfield, with Demaree moving to left, and this arrangement probably will be carried out again tomorrow, when Clay Bryant will try to make it two in a row for the Bruins. The Pirates' slab choice was Bob Klinger.

Tobin gave Dean a pitching argument all the way today, allowing only eight hits. Bill Swift, who took over for the Bucs in the eighth, retired the side in order.

Cleveland Loss To Redskins Hit By Rams' Owner

Cleveland, Sept. 27 (AP).—Thomas E. Lipscomb, president of the Cleveland Rams of the National Pro Football League, said tonight he was dissatisfied with the club's showing against the Washington Redskins Sunday and would confer with Coach Hugo Bezdek and Assistant Coach Art Lewis.

Lipscomb said no player was certain of his job except the backs and ends. The Rams lost to Washington, 27-13, for their third straight league defeat this year and won only one game last season.

Sammy Baugh Picks Redskins to Repeat This Season

By "Slingin' Sammy" Baugh.
(Forward Passing Champion, National Football League.)

Thus far I've refrained from going out on the limb about the National Football League championship, but today I'm ready to make a prediction.

I think the winner of the league title will be the Washington Redskins.

This may not sound very modest on my part inasmuch as I am a member of the Redskins, but inasmuch as it's an old custom to predict winners I'm making my choice.

SAMMY BAUGH.

I hesitated to make my forecast at the start of the season as we had only a vague idea, at best, of the league set-up at that time. But now with three weeks of the season hiving passed, we are in a fair position to tell how the clubs are stacking up.

When I pick the Redskins to win the 1938 championship, I'm predicting, of course, that they will repeat. That means they would be the firt team since 1933 to win the league title two years in a row. But I believe they can do it.

When I pick the Redskins, I'm stringing along with a pretty good team, don't forget. Football experts, particularly, in the East, went on record last year that the Redskin team which beat the New York Giants, 49-14, for the Eastern Division championship at Yankee Stadium, was the most powerful football team ever assembled.

Then, of course, we followed that game by beating the Chicago Bears in the play-off, 28-21. How many teams have scored 28 points against the Bears in recent years. I'll answer that one for you—none.

At the start of the season, I couldn't conscientiously pick the Redskins to repeat because I didn't know to just what extent we would miss Cliff Battles. He was the greatest running back in football last season, in my opinion, and no team can lose him and not be hurt badly. Without Battles, we didn't figure to be as strong.

But we've been lucky. The Redskins have picked up in young Andy Farkas a back who can do almost as many things as Battles almost as well. I believe he'll be the outstanding rookie back of the season by the end of the campaign and one of the league's leading ground gainers.

And the Redskins have been fortunate, too, in coming up with a capable fellow in Bill Hartman, of Georgia. It is a case of the Redskins having the luck to come up with two sensational young backs in the same season, which doesn't occur very often in pro football.

There doesn't seem to be any slackening, either, in that Redskin line. It was our line that paved the way to our championship last year and this season veterans like Turk Edwards and Les Olsson don't seem to have slowed at all. And we have better replacements than last year. In Roy Young, the Texas A. and M. lad who can play either guard, tackle or end, the Redskins have made a powerful addition.

In our first three games we have two wins and a tie to show, and that is plenty encouraging to the Redskins, inasmuch as Riley Smith and myself, two regular backs, have not been in uniform since the first game on account of injuries. When Riley and I return to action I think we'll lend something more to the Redskins' attack.

The team we'll have to beat in the East is the New York Giants, I believe. I say that despite the Giants' defeat by the Philadelphia Eagles last Sunday. The Giants are always tougher as the season progresses.

The Eagles are a new power in the Eastern Division. They played us to a 26-to-23 game a few weeks ago, and it wasn't exactly surprising when they bumped off the Giants, 14 to 10. In Dick Riffle and Dave Smulker they have a pair of outstanding backs and in Joe Carter and Hewitt they have as fine a pair of ends as there is in the league.

In the West, it's fairly safe to predict that either the Chicago Bears or the Detroit Lions will be the division winners. The Chicago Cardinals, the Green Bay Packers and the Cleveland Club don't appear to measure up, in my opinion.

If, as I hope, the Redskins win the Eastern Division championship, I won't have many fears about our chances in the play-off against the West. The Redskins have a habit of gearing themselves up to their best effort when it is demanded. I think we're a pretty good football team—good enough to repeat.

Steve Mamakos Defeats Bobby Pacho at Stadium

Down In Front

By Richards Vidmer

New York, Sept. 27.—It may come as something of a shock, but just a week from today the Yankees will be playing the first game of the World's Series. Just whom they will be playing is a matter of increasing speculation, however.

VIDMER.

But whether it is to be the Cubs or the Pirates shouldn't, and probably doesn't, worry the Yankess in the slightest, unless it is from a purely economical point of view. Naturally, they would prefer to play the Cubs, not because they figure Gabby Hartnett's hurricanes the softer touch in the series, but because Wrigley field in Chicago can accomodate more customers than the Pittsburgh pavillion for the first two games. The Yankees don't figure on returning to either city for a sixth contest.

And there is precedent fo this sot of figuring. Only once before have the Yankees' faced the Pirates in a world's series, and only once before have they faced the Cubs. Neither series required a fifth game, much less a sixth. The Yankees of '32 conquered the Cubs in the same short, decisive manner. But each series, brief as it was, brings back a lot of memories.

There is, first of all, the memory of the Yankee lineup. It included Coombs, Koenig, Ruth, Gehrig, Meusel, Lazzeri and Dugan in that order, for every afternoon, almost without variation, the play-by-play experts would dictate the same phrases to their operators — "Coombs singled to left . . . Koenig walked . . . Ruth hit a home run into the rightfield bleachers . . . Gehrig hit a home run into the centerfield bleachers . . ."

There is the memory of the Yankees taking their batting practice before the first game of the series. It may seem strange that this should stand out, and yet it was significant. None of the Pirates ever had seen Ruth, Gehrig, Meusel, Laeri and the others whose mighty clouts were chronicled in the press almost daily. And they gathered to watch batting practice, wondering, and perhaps doubting, if these men really hit like that or if it was a figment of fiction.

I can't remember who was pitching in batting practice, but he had wonderful control, for he hit each Yankee bat in turn and one after the other the ball maulers stepped to the plate and parked pitch after pitch in the distant stands.

The Pirates departed in a collective daze. And they knew they were beaten before the series started.

There was an almost perfect game pitched by Herb Pennock in the Yankee Stadium. The long, lean lefthander turned back the pirates for seven and one-third innings without the semblance of a hit, throwing his slow curve with magic precision.

And there was the anticlimax that ended the series. With the score tied, 3 to 3, in the last half of the last inning, the Yankees filled the bases and for practically the first time there was a measure of excitement. Then, without warning, John Miljust, the Pirate pitcher, let loose a wild pitch and the winning run romped home.

There are many unimportant memories connected with the only series ever played between the Yankees and the Cubs, but standing out above all the others and forcing them into the background is the glamorous picture of Babe Ruth standing at the plate in Chicago—one against the mob.

The Cubs that year had started off under the management of Rogers Hornsby. He had been released after the fight was more than half over and Chicago had gone on to win the pennant under Charlie Grimm, aided tremendously down the stretch by the timely and consistent hitting of Mark Koenig, who had been called from the Coast League in an emergency. But when they voted how the spoils should be split before the series started they gave Koenig only a part share and Hornsby none at all.

This irked the great humanitarian George Herman Ruth and he expressed his opinion of the Cubs' questionable generosity in no uncertain terms—and for publication. The Chicago fans, however, were of the conviction that their champions could do no wrong, and so when the Yankees arrived at Wrigley Field for the third game of the series, having won the first two in New York, the Babe became a target for abuse, vegetables, fruit and assorted boos, hisses and jeers.

But the Babe simply smiled as he stepped to the plate, arrogantly pointed to the centerfield fence and while the shouts of derision still filled the air, majectically drove the ball over the spot indicated and trotted around the bases.

The Pirates will not have to watch Combs, Koenig, Ruth, Meusel, Lazzeri and Dugan knocking balls into the stands in batting practice, nor will the Cubs have the heroic Babe to contend with should they meet the Yankees again. But there are others just as destructive, just as heroic, and the Yankees wait only to see which team they will have to beat. As far as they are concerned it is a very dull week.

Joe Perry Wins Over Huerta

Lembi Beats Calp
De Polio Beats Jordan
Saugsted Beats Raspi
Scores a T. K. O.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Steve Mamakos, the Southwest strong boy, elbowed his way through a chap by the name of Bobby Pacho last night at Griffith Stadium to an easy ten-round decision.

It was no contest after the second round, and never enough of a fight to arouse the customers from their lethargy. And speaking of customers, they must have known something because they remained away in large numbers. Some 1,500 turned out for the farce.

Pacho, rated ninth by the National Boxing Association, was the poorest excuse for a boxer yet exhibited here. He sported a roll of fat around his waistline as big as a life-preserver, and didn't appear anxious to fight.

He spent most of the evening lolling on the ropes rolling with Mamakos' punches, or leaning heavily on the energetic but impotent Greek lad. He didn't exert himself at any time during the fight, and threw punches like a miser tossing away gold pieces.

Mamakos Tries

Mamakos tried hard but looked foolish, nevertheless. Most of his punches curled harmlessly around Pacho's neck, were blocked by an elbow or glove, or missed completely.

The few times Steve stabbed Pacho in the tummy the Mexican bellowed like a stuck elephant. His breathing was labored after the seventh and it was problematical whether he would be able to stand up long enough for the referee to award Mamakos the decision.

Mamakos, of course, showed no pain. His right eye had a shoepolish glow coming out for the ninth, and there was a puffiness on the right cheek-bone. Blood drolled from his unprotected mouth. Pacho, as weary as he was, made a strong comeback in the ninth, but it didn't even win the round.

Lembo Beats Calp

Frankie Lembo, 129¼, of San Francisco, won a unanimous decision over Calvin Calp, 132, of Baltimore, in a gory six-round semifinal. It was all Lembo after the third when Calp seemed to lose his steam, and it was in this round that both suffered nasty cuts from butting in a corner.

Lembo's battle-scarred eye was split wide open, and Calp's scalp was ripped open during the melee as both boys stood toe-to-toe and slugged it out. Lembo was guilty of hitting low in the fourth and fifth, but carried two rounds by a wide margin.

Perry Beats Huerta

Irish Joe Perry, 131¼, scored a unanimous decision over Pancho Huerta, 129, in another six. Huerta waged a surprisingly good and hard fight, keeping on Perry in the earlier rounds and rending his sharp left jab null and void.

Vince de Polio, 161¼, of Baltimore, made a successful pro-debut, shaking up Tom Jordon considerably while out-pointing him in a four-rounder. It also was Jordon's first pro appearance. He weighed 163½ pounds.

Eddie Saugsted scored a technical knockout over the aged Joe Raspi, of Baltimore, in the second of a scheduled six-rounder.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Sept. 27.—Coach Hank Hardwick drove the Navy varsity eleven through a brisk and bruising scrimmage with the plebes this afternoon in an effort to tighten up the defensive work, which was not altogether satisfactory in last week's opener with William and Mary.

For more than an hour the plebes carried the ball, using formations Virginia Military Institute, Saturday's opponent, employed against Virginia last week and probably will use against Navy. They tried passes, line bucks, spinners and reverses—everything the Middies will have to watch, and were not very successful.

Hardwick was pleased with the squad's progress, but not satisfied. His critical nautical eye detected faults not visible to the layman, and minced no words pointing them out to the offending players. Virtually the remainder of the week will be devoted to defensive work, although th offense will not be entirely neglected.

Lou Mayo, understudy to Emmett Wood, who was injured Saturday, was back in uniform today and will be ready to face the Cadets. Without him to stand behind Wood and give him a rest every now and then the Middies would be in a tight spot. Harold Harwood, first reserve center; Clarence Corbett, end, and Harold Felix, another center, all of whom were injured, will be ready by Saturday.

Wilson May Quit At End of Week

Philadelphia, Sept. 27 (AP).—The Evening Ledger today quoted Manager Jimmy Wilson, of the Philadelphia National League Club, as saying he would resign at the end of this week.

Jerry Nugent, president of the club, said he had no word on the subject from Wilson.

Nugent declined to deny or confirm reports that J. T. Prothro, of Memphis, Tenn., would be the club's next manager.

Ross started for the A's and lasted five and a third innings, the Sox getting nine hits and four runs off him.

Harris and Peacock, the Boston battery, gathered five of the visitors' hits. One of them a home run by Peacock.

The game was called at the end of the eighth inning because of darkness.

Johnnies Card Set

Open With American Game October 22
Play at Annapolis

Annapolis Md., Sept. 27.—St. John's College, whose football has extended well over a half century, is almost starting the game anew, owing to shrinkage of its squad of veterans to almost the vanishing point.

Games with Maryland, William and Mary and Gettysburg, for which the Johnnis could have only been push-overs, have been canceled and the first match will be with American University at Annapolis, on October 22.

In the meantime, Coaches Val Lentz and John Donohoe are working with a squad of 50, which includes backs at 135 puonds and tackles at 150.

A series of "six-man games" are being played to determine what can be called the varsity men and, the coaches say, everybody is getting a lot of fun out of it and there will be some sort of a team ready to play the five games which make up the schedule this year.

Just half of the squad is from the new freshmen class, and few of them look up to the standard of college football. One lineman, Stew Archie, 195-pound tackle, and by far the giant of the squad, and two backs, Fred Buck and Skippy McMillan, are the only regulars of last year now on the squad.

Lentz and Donohoe have picked 19, however, as the present varsity squad and the contracted games now going on may produce some others.

Fred Perry Opens Pro Tennis Play

Chicago, Sept. 27 (AP).—Fred Perry, the Englishman who ruled British and American amateur tennis for three years, will make his first bid for national professional honors tomorrow in the 1938 singles and doubles tournament opening at the Chicago Arena.

He will team with Richards in doubles play.

Mrs. Hussey Wins President's Plate Tourney

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Mrs. George Hussey, tournament committee member of the Women's District Golf Association, from Army and Navy, won the President's Plate event yesterday at Congressional over a field of officers and past presidents of the association.

Mrs. Hussey and a clubmate, Mrs. T. J. Johnson, actually tied with low nets of 82, the former scoring 88-6—82, and Mrs. Johnson, 89-7—82, but rather than play off for the main triphy Mrs. Johnson conceded the low net and took the low gross prize, as Mrs. Hussey was eligible for only one trophy.

Mrs. J. C. Dale, KeKnwood, won second low net with 51, 44-695-11—84, while Mrs. H. L. Simcoe won third in a draw with Mrs. C. E. McGowan, of Beaver Dam. Mrs Simcoe scored 103-18—85, and Mrs. McGowan, 106-23—85.

Mrs. R. C. Miller, vice president of the body, from Kenwood, won the high net award with 101, while Best Sport prizes went to Mrs. Frank Kramer, Manor, and Mrs. E. Midmayer, Argyle.

Mrs. Hussey was out in 46, with threes on the third and ninth holes, and back in 42, finishing one under par figures on the seventeenth and eighteenth holes, with a three and four.

Mrs. Johnson apparently was out of the running for the prizes, as she required 50 strokes on the first nine, but she cracked 40 coming back with a fine 39, finishing with a birdie three on the finishing hole for her score that tied Mrs. Hussey.

The members of the host Congressional Club were hosts at a cocktail party for the entrants, following the play. Mrs. R. W. Payne presented the prizes.

Capital Is Host To Congressional

Capital's strengthened golf team will play host to Congressional's defending champions in the feature enconter in the second round of the Maryland State Golf Association team matches Sunday, as play enters the quarter-final round.

In the other upper-bracket pairin Baltimore C. C. visits Rodgers Forge, conquerors of Kenwood, in an all-Baltimore match. Green Spring Valley, upset victors over a weakened Chevy Chase team, meets Beaver Dam, who settled its tie differences with Manor by the flip of a coin, while Indian Spring's co-favored line-up meets its first severe test in Hillendale, the 1937 finalists, over the Towson layout.

Bolstered by Johnny Burke, Intercollegiate, District and Rhode Island Open and Amateur titleholder, the Capital team is regarded as a possible victor over the well-balanced Congressional line-up captained by Parker Nolan and led by Wiffy Cox.

The Sylvester-coached lads trounced Suburban, 13-5, last week and over their home course, and with Sylvester, Burke, Charlie Pettijohn, Billy Houghton, George Molloy, Bob Brown, Henry Cohen, Bill Pendergast in the line-up, they may cause the champions the most trouble since Manor bowed, 11-7, in a semifinal test last year.

Three Deadlock for Wright Golf Trophy

R. S. Bean, A. W. Furness and W. C. Schroeder finished in a deadlock for the Wright trophy in the Bureau of Mines tournament yesterday at Indian Spring. Bean scored 111-39, 72; Furniss 97-25, 72, and Schroeder 84-12, 72.

L. Plein had low net for the day's play but was not eligible for the trophy. Plein scored 102-36, 66.

G. R. Hopkins won low gross with an 81, and Scroeder was second with 84.

Grand Slam Beats Evening Shadow in 'Graw's Feature

Seabiscut To Race at The 'Graw

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 27.—Seabiscuit, Charles S. Howard's great horse whose defeats make bigger news than his victories, is scheduled to race two speedy feminine rivals in the twenty-seventh running of the Havre de Grace Handicap at the Maryland track tomorrow.

Making his first start since he was beaten in the Manhattan Handicap at Belmont Park, the Biscuit has been asked to pick up 129 pounds and run a mile and one-eighth against Thomas D. Taggart's Marcia, the season's best filly, and William Ziegler's Esposa, recent winner of the Hawthorne Gold Cup.

Although Seabiscuit will be giving away considerable weight to both those rivals and eseveral highly-regarded colts, he probably will go to the post an even money favorite—if it doesn't rain. He's a poor mudder and seldom starts when the track is at all heavy.

Besides Marcia, weighted with 124 pounds, and Esposa, in at 121, the Biscuit's leading rivals are expected to be Hal Price Headley's 3-year-old star, Menow, winner of the Potomac Handicap, and W. S. Kilmer's Nedayr. Completing the field are Two Bob, Savage Beauty, Masked General, the horse that gave War Admiral a tussel last fall; Rex Flag and Mr. Canron.

William Woodward's Johnstown, advance favorite to win the $80,000 Futurity at Belmont Park Saturday, galloped to an easy victory today in the Nursery Handicap over the same straightaway course on which the Futurity is run. Jockey Jimmy Stout just sat still and let Johnstown run and the colt ran the 6 furlongs in 1:10 3-5 to win by five lengths. He carried 122 pounds.

Next in line was G. D. Widener's Birch Rod, another Futurity eligible, which beat Herbert M. Woolf's Inscoleda by three lengths. Gallapol, also eligible for the Futurity, was out of the money.

Sickle T., which Mrs. E. F. Whittaker recently acquired from Warren Wright, scored his first victory for his new owner by taking the Montauk Claiming Stakes over the mile and a furlong at Belmont. He outran Clarence Buxton's entry of Knight's Haven and Billy Van Nuys by four lengths to pick up a $2,100 purse.

Grand Slam, the Bomar Stable veteran, made his first appearance at Havre de Grace and whipped a good field of sprinters to win the 6-furlong Hillen Road Purse. He broke in front and never was headed, leading E. D. Shaffer's Evening Shadow by a length with Rai Parr's King Pharamond third. Grand Slam ran the distance in 1:12 3-5 and paid a $7.30 mutuel.

Gene Wozers, from J. Van Winkle's barns, stepped the fastest 6 furlongs of the Latonia meeting to win the featured event there in 1:13 1-5. The daughter of Jean Valjean, leading throughout, finished a length ahead of the Tail Trees Stable's Navarre, who beat a stablemate, Last Message, for the place.

The combination of M. B. Smith's Hasty Star and Warren Yarberry, the brilliant jockey, accounted for the feature race at Rockingham Park. Taking a long lead, Hasty Star just outlasted J. H. Carr's fast-closing Prospector. Young was third. It was the sixth victory for Hasty Star and the eleventh time in 17 starts she has been in the money.

Grand Slam Brings His Followers $7.30 Ticket

Winner Never Headed Beats Off Challenge Favorite Falters King Pharamond 3d

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent

Havre de Grace, Md., Sept. 27.—Grand Slam, hard-running Chance Play horse from the Bomar Stable, made every post a winning one in taking down the fourth race, known as the Hillen Road Purse and top event on today's card here. With Jockey Bobby Morris doing the booting, Grand Slam left little doubt as to his superiority at the weights, winning with more ease than the final margin of one length suggests.

Evening Shadow, a slight favorite over Grand Slam, was second in the field of six with King Pharamond in third position. Unheralded, Dressy and Dixieland made up the "also ran" department.

Grand Slam, far back in his previous start at Detroit, was well played and brought his backers a $7.30 mutuel and he turned in time of 1:12 3-5 for the six furlongs. A crowd of 6,500 witnessed the program.

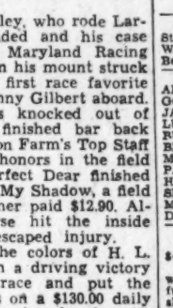
Jockey O. Laidley, who rode Larkar, was suspended and his case referred to the Maryland Racing Commission when his mount struck Short Cake, the first race favorite with Jockey Johnny Gilbert aboard. Short Cake was knocked out of contention and finished bar back while the Shandon Farm's Top Staff carried off first honors in the field of maidens. Perfect Dear finished second ahead of My Shadow, a field horse. The winner paid $12.90. Although his horse hit the inside fence, Gilbert escaped injury.

Coursing, in the colors of H. L. Straus, turned in a driving victory in the second race and put the finishing touches on a $130.00 daily double. Oak Apple, the favorite with Gilbert in the saddle, was second. Breadanbutter was third in the field of a dozen sprinters. Coursing paid an individual mutuel of $24.50.

After the crowd had played another Gilbert horse, Jadaan, into favoritism, A. C. Compton's Apprehend came from behind to win the third race and a mutuel of $10.10 was displayed. Golden Silence, one which set the pace almost from the break, was second with Jadaan third. Jadaan seemed unable to keep up in the early stages, but closed with a belated rush.

Our Guest Selector

Our Guest Selector for today is that old ad libber, Arch McDonald. He has consented to name some of his super triple-X specials on the Havre de Grace card. It is his first venture into the selectors' field since he picked Sitting Bull to beat Custer. The McDonald syestem of betting puts an emphasis on the long-nosed stieds. It is not generally known that McDonald in his youth appeared in silks. But that was before the collapse of the Confederacy when the McDonald fortune was wiped out. 6Last night he went into a huddle with himself and the dope sheets, chewed up a half-dozen pencils, and came up with a wild-eyed look and the following selections at the Graw today:



1—Shandon Farm entry, L'envoi, Chatabit.
2—Idle Elf, Company Halt, Anglo-Saxon (if eligible) if not—Balcony.
3—Rocky Road, Jolyon, Dignity.
4—Abbatoro, White Sand, Knight Warrior.
5—Esposa, Sea Biscuit, Nedayr.
6—Carvola (five star longshot $100 special) (b) Entry Fogelson, Hypocrite.
7—Would Dare, Sciva, Irish Vote.

G. W. Scrimmages C. U.

Two Squads Drilled on Air Defense

Coaches Bear Down
Appear Pleased
Lou Mayo Returns
Blocking, Tackling Off

By Jack Munhall.

George Washington and Catholic University elevents, squirming more uneasily each day under reports of the unexpected strength of first-game opposition and determined not to duplicate Maryland's costly mistake of underestimating an opening opponent, continued preparation in intersquad scrimmage yesterday.

The workout, latest in the series which has seen G. U., G. W., C. U. and Maryland near a more perfect athletic union by frequent informal games, was highly beneficial both for the Colonials, who meet Furman Friday night, and the Cards, who tackle St. Bonaventude Sunday.

It was conducted not to compare the merits of the local rivals, but rather to help each overcome known weaknesses. George Washington and Catholic boast fairly strong passing attacks, but conversely are a bit bewildered when the enemy retaliates with aerial bombs.

So it was with this in mind that Coaches Reinhart and Bergman got together. First George Washington would take the ball and loose all types of passes, the short, hard ones into the flat and the long, dangerous ones down the middle and then it would go on the defensive while the Cards tried to riddle its secondary.

Coaches Pleased

As a result both coaches expressed satisfaction with improvement shown in forward pass defense, though they could not say the same for the blocking or the tackling of their teams. The blocking of the Colonials was especially bad and Reinhart promised plenty of work before Furman's Purple Hurricane blows in.

Catholic unveiled what is expected to be its chief line of attack against the Saints, who upset Manhattan Saturday, in the sturdy right ar mof Halfback Burke Vidnovic, easily the best passer on the field. He showed not only plenty of distance but accuracy on his heaves. Vidnovic's leather bullets were received by all the backs and ends, particularly Pete Sachon, halfback. The Cards used two complete backfields and several line combinations.

In one backfield were Joe Guyon and Vidnovic at halves, Hank San Ambogio at fullback, and Sachon at quarterback. The other quartet consisted of Halbacks Tuffy Ryan and Frank Krawczel, Fullback Matukaitis and Quarterback Leo Dunn, a Washington boy.

Richardson Improves

Bill Richardson, who will be Vic Sampson's understudy, was George Washington's best passer and probably will be employed as a "climaxer" Friday. The former Central High star is playing better than ever and Reinhart is staking much on his running and passing talents.

Following a testing scrimmage with George Washington Monday, Coach Jack Hagerty yesterday named a tentative starting line-up for Georgetown for its opener against Hampden-Sydney at Griffith Stadium Saturday.

Warning that the personnel of the first eleven was subject to immediate and drastic change, Hagerty named a team, including six sophomores, confirming the belief that much of Georgetown's hopes for a successful season are based on the performance of these unpredictable football critters.

Here's the team: Ends, Bob Kercher and Johnny Lascari; tackles Earl Fullilove and Joe Frank; guards, Augie Lio and Jim Hill; center, Jim Hill; halfbacks, Joe Mellendeck and Jules Koshlap; quarterback, Charles Wychunas, and fullback, Myron Darmohray.

The sophs are Kercher, Fullilove, Lio, Lascari, Matuza and Koshlap.

Man of the Month

By Arch McDonald

Each day, Arch McDonald distributes 10 points among the Nats whose play was most helpful to the Washington Club. At the end of each month The Washington Post will award to the leading player a gift in token of the honor of being The Post-Wheaties "Man of the Month."

Only three Nats—Taft Wright, Al Simmons and Zeke Bonura—figure in the latest award of points in the Man of the Month contest on the basis of yesterday's game at Yankee Stadium. The points were distributed as follows:

To Wright, four points, because he contributed a single and a triple to the Nats' attack and scored a run.

To Simmons, three points, because he pounded out three of the Nats' hits.

To Bonura, three points, because he drove in the Nats' only two runs.

THE SCORE.

Wright	38	Bluege	7
Bonura	27	Appleton	7
Myer	24	Kelley	5

Episcopal Beats G. W.

Colonials Lose, 7-6
Woodward Is Star
Get City Title

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Alexandria, Va., Sept. 27.—Outplayed for more than three full quarters, Episcopal High School gridmen came back in the waning moments of the final period with a touchdown and an extra point to defeat George Washington High, 7-6, in their annual "city championship" contest here this afternoon.

Stanley Woodward, a converted end from last year's undefeated team, who started his first game at fullback today, scored all the Maroons' points, plunging over from the 2-yard line for the touchdown and taking a pass from "Stumpy" Craighill for the extra point. But it was the stellar pass receiving and shifty running of Ben Dulany, a reserve end from the 1937 eleven, that paved the way for the Maroons' victory, for it was his 45-yard gallop with a pass from Craighill that placed the preppers in scoring position on the 5-yard line. In three plays Woodward went over, and then added the extra point.

After a first-quarter threat expired Stanley Haflin's field goal attempt from the 12-yard was blocked by the Episcopal forewall, the Presidents scored their only touchdown midway of the third quarter on a 40-yard run by Halfback Jimmy Taylor after he had taken a 15-yard pass from Ed Williams. Taylor snake-hipped his way through half the Episcopal team, finally feinting "Red" Bradfield, the Maroons' safety man, out of position to cross the goal line unmolested.

Prior to their fourth-quarter score, the Maroons had been able to make but little headway against the stout George Washington forewall, and they had been limited to a scant total of one first down. Time and again the G. W. forfaards broke through to smear Episcopal backs and place them on the defensive.

The running of Ed Williams and Jimmy Taylor, and the pass-snatching of Eddie Nowlad, featured the George Washington offensive, while Bradfields, Woodward and Craighill sparked Episcopal's attack. Defensively, Ed Nowland, Albert O'Brien and Griffith Schelhorn stood out for the Presidents, while Capt. Charlie Barrett and Billy Suhling starred for the winners.

Gordon Bangs Double

It was 2-0 by the end of the second, Gordon banging a double to center and Glenn scoring him with a single to center. In the fourth the Yanks came up with another run in the same fashion—a double by Gordon and a single by Glenn. Gehrig personally made it 4-0 in the fifth with a home run far into the Washington bull pen in right center.

Meanwhile, Gomez was breezing. Simmons' single in the second inning and Myer's single in the fifth were the only hits he permitted until Buddy Lewis opened the seventh with a single to left.

Taft Wright then singled over second to hit safely in his twenty-first consecutive game, but the Nats extracted only one run out of the inning because Zeke Bonura grounded into a double play.

With Kelley pitching for the Nats after a two-inning shift by Weaver, the Yankees came up with a run in the eighth. Selkirk singled, stole second and scored on the pesky Gordon's single.

The Nats made the score look a bit more respectable when they scored a run in the ninth on Wright's triple and Bonura's single, but that's all they did.

would have scored with more time. Gonzaga's line, weak in the middle all afternoon, gave way before the rushes of Rick Rozzelle, a substitute halfback, and Central pushed its way to three consecutive first downs, moving the ball from its own 38 to Gonzaga's 33. The final gun suspended play at that point.

Greenberg

Greenberg can attempt to better Babe Ruth's record.

Detroit swept the double-header with the St. Louis Browns, 5 to 4, and 10 to 2.

Mark Christman, Detroit third baseman, hit a home run inside the park in the first game, and Dixie Walker and Charlie Gehringer hit regulation homers in the double bill, Gehringer's his twentieth of the season.

Maryland Hunting Seen Best in Years

Baltimore, Sept. 27 (AP).—State Game Warden E. Lee Lecompte predicted today Maryland sportsmen would enjoy better hunting in 1938-39 than in any year since 1934.

"Reports from throughout the State on all species of upland game birds and game animals are very encouraging," he said. "The department has received more complaints from farmers as to destruction of crops by cottontail rabbits and squirrels this season than we have received for a number of years past."

Corporations Are Adopting Pension Plans

Also Group Insurance D. C. Underwriters Meet Engelsman Speaks

By Thomas M. Cahill.

In the next few years business organizations will provide for their employes greater pension and insurance plans than ever before. This was the prediction yesterday of Ralph G. Engelsman, noted New York life insurance agent and writer on insurance topics, in an address at a luncheon meeting of the District of Columbia Life Underwriters Association at the Willard Hotel.

Mr. Engelsman, a general agent of the Penn Mutual Life Insurance Co. and a member of the original Million Dollar Round Table group of volume-producing salesmen, informed the more than 200 persons in attendance that the Government has made business firms conscious of this provision and he felt that they would rather begin an extensive program voluntarily than take the chances of being forced to do so at some future time.

"The popularity of salary savings, group pensions and pension trusts will be constantly increasing," he said. "It is interesting to note how it has taken hold and that companies whose 1938 business is off on their regular insurance issues show a substantial gain on their salary saving and pension plans."

Mr. Engelsman also directed attention to new opportunities which are being offered in the women's insurance market. "This field," he declared, "is being developed on a more intelligent and extensive basis. Not only are professional and business women buying life insurance today but women of means are buying insurance for tax purposes precisely as men. Also, the average family man is insuring his wife as a precaution against any financial embarrassment."

Speaker an Author

The speaker, who is author of "Practical Prospecting," "More Practical Selling" and other books, praised the social security act as a stimulus toward better thinking about retirement incomes. "The fact that the worker is now assured some income at the age of 65," he explained, "stimulates his thinking about retirement—instead of damning the act."

Yesterday's meeting was the first of a series which the underwriters will hold during the fall, winter and spring and at which they will present leading figures in the insurance field. The assembly was the first under the administration of the association's new president, R. W. Griswold, of the Guardian Life Insurance Co. J. E. McCombs, of Berkshire Life Insurance Co., presented a report of the underwriters' national convention at Houston.

General Cable to Build Biggest Power Circuit

New York, Sept. 27 (AP).—General Cable Corporation has received an order for a $1,222,000 cable to carry power from Boulder Dam to Los Angeles, it was learned today. The new circuit, described as carrying the greatest load of any power line in the country, is expected to be ready for service in December, 1939, and will add 50 per cent to present capacity.

The new cable will be manufactured in the Los Angeles plant of the company, it was announced, and would require approximately 844,000 man-hours to build.

Tire Output Jumps 22 Per Cent in August

New York, Sept. 27 (AP).—Rubber tire production jumped 22 per cent in August over the previous month, the Rubber Manufacturers Association stated today, topping the comparable month last year by a scant margin.

Output totaled 4,093,234 tires last month against 3,352,601 in July and 3,982,781 in the same period last year. The upturn was largely seasonal, analysts said.

Wheat Wavers With Shifting War News

Closing Prices Lower Late Drop and Rally Corn Declines

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Sept. 27.—Collapsing almost 2 cents late today, and then wildly shooting upward 1¾ cents, Chicago wheat values reflected alternate fast changes in war and peace prospects.

A radio address by Prime Minister Chamberlain of Great Britain that came just before trading here was at an end, gave a shock to hopes of peace, and kited the market instanter, but without fully overcoming previous losses. These had largely resulted from reports of plans afoot for an international commission to define Sudeteland frontiers.

It had been asserted the plans regarding frontiers would facilitate occupation of Sudetenland by Germany before the Hitler deadline Saturday. For at least the time being, however, Chamberlain's radio talk appeared to wheat traders to dash any great confidence that a peace solution was in sight.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were ⅛@⅜ of a cent down compared with yesterday's finish, December 66⅛@67, May 67⅝@67¾, corn ⅝ to 1 cent lower, December 50⅞@50¾, May 53¼@53⅝, oats ¼@⅜ off, rye ¼@⅝ off, rye ⅜@¾ up, and provisions showing 2 cents to 10 cents decline.

Shorts Lift Spot Cotton

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 27.—Covering in October lent steadiness to cotton today. The spot month advanced from 7.74 to 7.90, closing 14 points net higher, while other months were 1 to 4 points net higher. December recovered from 7.74 to 7.85 and closed at 7.83.

The market opened 1 to 4 points lower, influenced by the issuance of notices against 437 October contracts and continued nervousness over European conditions. Late month coverings soon developed through spot houses and New Orleans. Toward the close selling developed following Prime Minister Chamberlain's address in London, but after prices reacted to net losses of 5 to 11 points, renewed covering in October appeared.

Europe Rules Prices Closing Here Lower Sterling at New Low

New York, Sept. 27.—The threat of war took its toll again today in financial markets. With no thought of trade and business developments, those who deal in securities, commodities and money kept their attention rivited on the capitals of Europe, where every hour brought some new turn of affairs in the Czechoslovakian crisis.

Most sensitive to events today was sterling, which plunged again to a new low despite official support at intervals both here and abroad. Adding to their declines of the previous day were the foreign dollar bonds and while the numerous declines of from 2 to 7 points were not sensational as on Monday, there was a handful of much wider breaks, the obligations of one city in Argentina collapsing 26 points. In the stock market there was a recovery early in the day but gains were wiped out in the final hour following the speech by Prime Minister Chamberlain. Cotton was little changed for the active months but wheat, a barometer of tidings during periods of international disturbances, broke early in the day as hopes for peace were raised only to lose nearly this amount after the Chamberlain speech. Its close was plus ⅛ to ⅝ cent a bushel. United States Government bonds were irregular.

Foreign markets were closing about the time business started in New York, but they followed no regular course. The London exchange invoked the war-time expedient of fixing minimum prices for gilt-edge British government securities. Prices on that board recovered late after weakness. Paris was weak while there was a better tone in Berlin and Amsterdam. While business was being transacted abroad, sterling and the franc did better in terms of the dollar after hitting new lows for the move both, turned sharply lower in New York dealings.

Listen to Chamberlain

Trading was light on the big board, but such reassurance as might have been derived from this evident lack of liquidation pressure was partially dispelled when trading took on larger proportions in the final hour after Chamberlain had spoken. While he was at the microphone, the stock ticker was virtually dead. Floor members, in some cases, left the stock exchange building and went to their offices to listen to the radio. In virtually all customers' rooms there were crowds around the radios.

The seriousness of the prime minister's talk contributed to the late selling. While only 771,210 shares of stock changed hands on the big board, about 300,000 shares of this total appeared on the tape after he closed his speech. Early gains, which had been based on the assumption that the war fever had cooled somewhat, were eliminated in most issues and the composite gain of the general list was negligible, amounting to only 0.03 point. A handful of stocks held gains, in a few cases running from 1 to 3 points, but the majority showed minus signs.

Foreign bonds followed a course similar to that of Monday in that offerings were relatively light, but the almost total absence of buyers contributed to sharp losses. A few of the Australian issues came back to make up 1 to 3 points of their previous loss. Italian 7s gained 1½ but Italian Public Utility Credit Institute 7s slumped 7 points and Sydney 5½s were off 7½. Queensland issues were firmer and Rhine Westphalia 6s were down 4. There was some pressure against South American issues to add to the rout of the foreign dollar bond list.

Sterling at 5-Year Low

The foreign exchange market supplied the best manifestation of the nervousness of the world. Sterling went to a new low for the last five years, touching $4.72⅝. The previous low was $4.72 made on October 30, 1933. It closed today at $4.72 7-16, off 2 5-16 cents for the day. For three days now sterling has lost 2 cents or more a day.

Trading was hevay on foreign currencies in this market and much of the weakness took place during and after the Chamberlain speech. The loss in sterling during this period was about a cent. Meanwhile the flow of funds to this country continued as heavy as it has been at any time during the crisis and during the last two or three days foreign holders of American securities have been selling on balance. This was not true before, their sales and their purchases having been almost an offset against each other. Other European currencies followed sterling in dealings today.

In the stock market it appeared for the major part of the session that a breathing spell was in order. Gains of 2 and 3 points were noted in a number of the speculative leaders and trading was dull. There were a few cases of gains of 4 and 5 points, but the leaders were off at the close.

Bonds Hold Firm

With volume of trading running somewhat under the preceding session, bond prices on the big board today managed to achieve a slightly firmer tone, the average for 30 domestic issues being up 0.14 points. Treasurys were relatively inactive and price changes mixed. Movements were limited to about 16-32s, except in some issues which have not been traded recently.

The foreign section continued to attract much of the trading activity, turnover being about one-third of the day's total. German and Belgian issues generally sold lower, some with declines of as much as 4 points. French 7s of '49 also were down, while the 7½s had a fractional gain. Italians were mixed, the 7s of '51 advancing 1½, while Public Utility Credit of '52 was down 7 points. Canadians were active in small price changes lacking uniform trend. Czech issues showed only seller prices at the close. South American bonds lost ground.

Food Trade Inventories Drop 9.6%

Half-Year Record Good Chain Cut Largest 3,000 Firms Report

New York, Sept. 27.—As compared with other broad divisions of trade, the food trade closed the first half of 1938 in a relatively favorable inventory position, according to Mid Year Inventory Survey figures, released today by Dun & Bradstreet, Inc. Almost 3,000 manufacturing, wholesale and retail concerns in the food trades furnished the information on which the tabulations and estimates have been based.

Although the various food manufacturing industries show wide variation as to inventory experience, the total decrease for the food manufacturing group of 9.6 per cent between January 1 and June 30 is a more rapid decrease than the par of 7.7 for all kinds of manufacturing. Moreover, food manufacturing as a whole had not piled up inventories in the previous two years to the same extent as other industries; having shown a moderate increase of 25 per cent during 1936 and 1937, as compared with 38 per cent for all manufacturing.

Wholesale Group

In the food wholesaling group—where the wholesale grocers with their nonperishable inventories carry the major weight—a decrease was registered in line with the average of 5 per cent for all wholesaling. This continues the food trade experience during 1936 and 1937, when food wholesalers' inventories increased only a little more than the par of 32 per cent for all wholesaling.

In food retailing the chain grocery record of 10.6 per cent reduction of inventory during the first six months of 1938, contrasts sharply with the 1 or 2 per cent increase in the holdings of independent retail grocers. Looking back two years, independent retail grocers inventories were built up 18 per cent during 1936 and 1937 against 3 per cent for chain grocers and 22 per cent for all retailing.

London, Sept. 27.—The stock market was quiet and orderly today as the London exchange instituted rigid control over prices of so-called gilt-edged issues to prevent panicky selling on war fears. British government bonds closed 1@2 points higher and transatlantic issues were 1 lower to 3 higher. The industrial group was mixed with tobacco and distilling shares in especially large supply, while domestic rails and chemicals moved higher. Central European bonds suffered heavy losses, with declines of 2 to 10 points, and Far Eastern liens were 1 to 3 down.

Paris.—The bourse closed with an easier tone and prices were mixed. French rentes finished unchanged to 50 centimes higher, Royal Dutch was up 65 and Suez Canal 150. Banking shares sold off with Bank of France stock down 250 francs.

Liverpool.—Wheat futures, after selling more than 2 pence higher early in the day, reacted on easier North American prices and liquidation in nearby options. Final quotations were 1d to 9d net lower. Cotton traders were inclined to even up commitments due to European political uncertainties and scattered buying and trade calling was offset by Bombay selling and liquidation. Closing prices were down 2 to 5 points.

Britain Takes Control Over Stock Prices

Aim Is to Avert Panic Trading Is Orderly 2½% Consols Rise

By the Associated Press

London, Sept. 27.—The London Stock Exchange was placed under rigid restrictions today to prevent war panic.

Price control for government securities and high-priced stocks and bonds—the so-called gilt-edge class—was instituted with the opening of the market.

Regulation was entirely under the direction of exchange authorities and there was no indication of government dictation, although the action was believed taken in conjunction with a government "suggestion."

Dealers quoted minimum prices on a long list of securities which in effect established rock-bottom quotations to prevent an abrupt break in values.

Buying and selling must be done by negotiation within fractions around minima.

If traders do not like the prices, they do not have to do business. That is exactly the idea—to keep panic sales away from the stock exchange.

Dealings Orderly

The effectiveness of the scheme was indicated in the dealings, which were extremely orderly and without a sign that the market was about to "run away."

Prices of securities other than those with agreed minima were made subject to negotiation in fixing the price for the transaction, but even in that category there was no publish rush to dump shares overboard.

As an example of price control, British government 2½ per cent consols were quoted at 88 today against a range yesterday of 65 to 70. Business yesterday was done around 65, which gives an indicated rise of 1 pound.

British government war loan today was 93, against yesterday's range of 90 to 98 and yesterday's final transaction at 92½.

Czechoslovak government 8 per cent and Prague municipal government 7½ per cent bonds were quoted nominally at £28, compared to quotations in the upper 30s last week.

All British government securities—under control—were higher.

Chicago Livestock

Chicago, Sept. 27 (AP).—A larger run of hogs than expected and further declines in the structure of wholesale work pulled unsettled the swine market today but prices held up fairly well. The run of 19,000 head, while 2,000 larger than expected, was 2,000 smaller than a week ago. Quotations on cutter cows, heifers, bulls and vealers pointed upward but common and medium grade steers moved slowly. Lamb prices were steady to strong, with natives topping early at 8.20, up a dime.

(U. S. Dept. Agr.).—HOGS—Receipts, 19,000, including 7,000 direct; active; light hogs and sows fully steady with Monday's average; others steady to 10 lower; few early sales 15 off; top 9.00; bulk, good and choice, 210-270 pounds, 8.75@9.00; 180-200 pounds, 8.35@8.75; 150-170 pounds, 8.00@8.40; good light packing sows, 7.75@8.15; few to 8.25; medium weights and heavies, 7.35@7.75.

CATTLE—Receipts, 7,000; calves, 1,200; slow; market on common and medium grade steers, mainly short-fed, weighty natives and thick-fleshed Westerns suitable for killing purposes; feeder dealers competing for weighty Western steers, with replacement merit outbidding killers; strictly good, choice and prime fed steers and all grades yearlings firm; heifers 10-15 higher; cutter-grade cows firm to 15 up; bulls strong to 15 higher; vealers strong; choice to prime steers topped at 13.35; several loads 12.50@13.10; strictly choice kosher heifers to 11.75; best light offerings 11.00; largely 9.50@12.00 steer trade; weighty sausage bulls selling more freely at 6.50; vealers 10.00@11.00; replacement market steady.

SHEEP—Receipts, 11,000, including 200 direct; late Monday spring lambs strong to 15 higher; Westerns and natives, 7.75@8.00; top on natives 8.10; today's trade moderately active fully, steady to stronger; bulk Westerns and natives, 7.75@8.00; early top natives, 8.20; best held higher; sheep steady.

Bob Burns Says—

I guess I've got too much of an inferiority complex to ever be a politician. Every time I hear about some newspaper or magazine entering my name in a popularity contest with some of these actors I feel like runnin' away and hidin' until it's all over.

I had an uncle that thought he was the most popular man in Crawford County until he ran for sheriff. After he lost the election, he was arrested for carryin' a gun and he said, "A man that ain't got no more friends in this county than I have oughta carry a gun."

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart.

IT IS true that several departments and independent agencies have pruned off what may be more than fair-sized blocs of employes for exclusion from the civil service and, in general, they give as reason that these employes have policy-determining jobs or that the jobs are of confidential nature—all of which at least have the merit of solid-sounding excuses for frustrating the June 24 Executive Orders.

AND, IT was learned yesterday, the Civil Service Commission will not start a fist-flying over the individual cases, despite the commission's militant attitude toward getting all that the Executive Orders might reasonably be construed as affording. The commission will meet the issue in general principle and not in individual case.

IT INTENDS to lay down "the broad principles" of what jobs should be included within status and what positions should be excluded and deliver these principles to the President in time for action to be taken before the orders become effective, February 1. Thus, the individual job and the question of whether certain chiefs are trying to exclude from civil service certain of their political plums will not be contested case by case. It will boil down to what blocs of jobs the President and the commission, under the "broad principles," discern as proper for inclusion or exemption.

SO, WITH the jobs treated not individually but entirely in relation to how they fit into the exact principles laid down for status or nonstatus, it is to assume that many of the plums excluded, by recommendation, may not be excluded after all.

ON THE sidelines, we hear the perennial growling about the "case system" in the Federal service; of how the guys who make $1,380 think themselves so much better than the fellow who makes $1,320, and so on. It's not the young ones in the service who carry on this way—it's the old-timers mostly

DID YOU know (or care if you do know) that Agriculture Department employes, who travel more than other Government folks, are kicking that 3½-cent mileage allowance for cars isn't enough . . . That charwomen in the Federal service aren't supposed to climb more than a couple of rungs on a stepladder—and when occasion makes them climb higher they squawk and beef and refer to the regulations . . . That so many practical jokes were played on a gentleman in Social Security that he suspected another when, the other day, a high official extended his hand in leave-taking of the office. "Who in the hell are you and what are you up to now," the practical joke victim asked the astounded official . . . That the lawyers in the service protested the loudest of their fine feeling for the civil service and are trying the hardest to keep their ranks clear of civil service?

News of Capital Night Clubs

By Mary Harris.

Heigh-Ho! Tally-ho!

Meaning that Pete Macias' Hi Club will take off for the season tomorrow night—Thursday. Pete and his Heigh-Ho are the Capital equivalents of Manhattan's El Morocco. The Heigh-Ho proper and its tap room, too, are pet stamping grounds of young Roosevelts, Leiters, duPonts, McLeans, also quantities of officials beginning with Cabient members. Big news stories have been born in Heigh-Ho, also died a-borning.

Tomorrow's Heigh-Ho debut (its sixth annual coming-out party will unveil a new, hand-picked Macias orchestra, directed by Artie Humes. It will be an "entertaining" band, always popping up with frothy specialties in addition to coloratura dance music. Also the club has been completely done over in tones of ivory, rose, turquoise and gold. Pete thinks that nighters-out want light, bright settings in place of the foremerly favored twilight effects.

Special. Heigh-Ho's orchestra will play in white ties and tails. The least you can do is to break out your dinner coats or mess jacket, at least on opening night.

When the dancers begin to spin at the official fall opening of Shoreham's Blue room on Saturday eve, it will be to a new brand of music. Maxim Lowe and Barnee have re-woven the Shoreham orchestra in a new and dazzling pattern. There's a complete new brass section (but this means muted and melodic brass, no "blasting"). Dexterous arrangements, novel interludes, trick introductions — these head the new Shoreham dance music idea. Ah-h, and there'll be a new girl vocalist, Mimi Norton, said to be pretty, as paint, to sing in five languages. Shoreham's Saturday party will also be graced by a new floor show. We'll tell you about that on Friday —we hope, we hope.

Current at the Shoreham are Towne and Knott, personable young folks with a knack for playful pantomime in dance; Kathryn Smith, who has appeared in dance interludes with the Philadelphia Symphony; the Two Deverins, acrobatic double-quick.

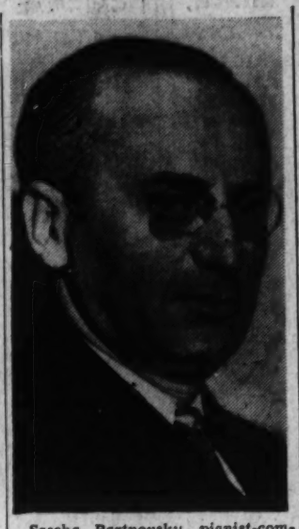
Come and Get It (and Quickly)

Hi Hat will say good-by to the String Swingsters next Saturday night. Pity 'tis, but all good things must wind up some time. So mark off one eve for adieux and a parting good time with the Swingsters.

Echoes Across Tables. In Wardman's Metronome Room: I'm all for the Newspaper Guild. It's fine. But I'll be darned if I'm going to work 40 hours a week for anybody. In the Rainbow Room: I must have a super-average fact. So many men say they's sure they've met me before. In Shar-Zad: You never know the meaning of misery until you've suffered from unrequited love and a hangover at the same time. In the Hour Glass: He's just married a widow with three children. The guy's lazy. In Mayfair: I know why a lotta these cab-drivers have too rear-vision mirrors, but those three looking-glasses in that last taxi——? In the Mayflower Lounge: He said that demi-weddings were as popular as demijohns down in his South Ca'lina home. In the King Cole Room: Is that fellow lucky? The fuse blew out just as her fiance came in. . . . . There's nothing wrong with our night spot acoustics.

Special-Special: Comes the melodious telephone voice of Mrs. Helen Hamilton with the good news that Troika will open for its seventh season on Friday, October 7. There'll be an elegant new gypsy violinist, balalikas, a floor show of Russians from Manhattan. Troika eves will again give you that "Nitchevo" mood.

Charlie Hellinger (Madrillon luncheon trio) plays a unique five-string 'cello. There are only a few other similar instruments in the country and they are used in non-commercial groups. What's more, Charlie personally made his 'cello and has been using it for the last ten years.



Sascha Bartnovsky, pianist-composer. Plays with the Arsenio Ralon Trio at the Madrillon luncheon hour

By Mary Harris

Lotus' "Parade of Youth" girls are actually carrying little baskets when they do "A-Tisket, A-Tasket." Star of the show is Ray Rogers, who tap dances like the great Georgie White did before Papa Time slowed his nimble feet. There's also ethereal Marjorie Johnstone, late of the Fokine ballet. Other colorful acts, too.

There'll be a new show at Bamboo Garden tomorrow evening. Manager Huey Liang vows it'll be slick as taffy, varied as a Chinese dinner.

Tonight will be your last chance to see the Paulins do their modernist rumba, to hear Helen Travers sing that ditty disapproving that Latins are lousy lovers, to watch the Lenora Coeds truck on down.

Greeters:

Mrs. Sallie Boynton, of Show Boat, on the Baltimore boulevard. She's medium blonde with a perfect classic profile, always perfectly groomed, delightfully cordial and frank. She likes button earrings.

Dick Richards, of Pine Grove. Tall, dark and handsome. Knows the sort of entertainment the younger crowd wants. He may look like a movie star, but he thinks like a businessman.

Jimmy Crandell, of Brinkley's. A regular guy with a big and genuine smile. An expert in good food and good drinks. Jimmy's all wool and 2 yards wide.

Tom O'Donnell, of Griffith Farms Tavern. Here we have the travelling host. When he isn't at Griffith, he's at his notable sea food restaurant in town.

Artie Humes, who'll wave the baton at Heigh-Ho's uppity opening party on Thursday, Sept. 29

Bakery's $296 Sought at Dump; Driver Mislaid It

A real "treasure hunt" began yesterday at the Continental Baking Co., 631 S street northwest, and led to several trash dumps in and near the city.

The hunt, which became much more than a game, was for $296, which was collected from the Giant Food Market, 3500 block Georgia avenue northwest.

Thomas P. Newman, driver for the bakery, collected the money. He said it might have been either lost or stolen from his truck en route or it might have been misplaced at the bakery and discarded with trash.

A collection of trash was made at the bakery shortly before the money was missed. Officials said it might have been carried to a dump.

Cosmopolitans to Meet

A Red Cross sketch will be presented at tomorrow's meeting of the Cosmopolitan Club in the Carlton Hotel at 12:30 p. m. Arrangements for the sketch were made by Dr. Anthony J. Scullen, chairman of the forum committee.
